Governor 'To Go Along' . . .

Exon To Sign Gatherings Bill

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday said he expects to sign into law the disputed bill providing a petition procedure for citizens to protest — and seek to prevent — any form of public gathering or entertainment.

"My inclination is to go along with a majority of the members of the Legislature," the governor said.

"This is one place where I feel I will not use the veto," Exon said. "This bill has some merits and it has some demerits but frankly, on balance, I don't think the overall impact will be overriding."

Court Test Likely

The bill, LB63, is "likely to be attacked in the courts," the governor noted, and its constitutionality can be determined there.

"I will use the veto power when necessary, but I will not use it promiscuously," Exon said.

The governor said he plans to discuss the bill with his counsel, Norman Krivosha, before making "a final determination . . . but I expect I'll sign it."

LB63 cleared the Legislature this week without a vote to spare, gaining enactment on a 25-21 count

Opposed By Party

Prior to legislative action on the proposal, the Democratic state executive committee voted to oppose the measure.

Exon said he is aware of his party's action, "and I think it's healthy for the Democratic Party to take stands without direction from me. I don't pretend to run the party machinery."

But the governor said he "will not follow party policy when I don't agree with it . . . although, generally, I think I will be agreeing with most of its decisions."

Exon said he "won't dictate to them, and I'm sure they don't want to dictate to me."

The governor said he hopes the party will continue to "take a stand on any issue" with which it is concerned.

On another matter, Exon said he will respond to the Legislature's invitation to explain his views on future operation of federal anti-poverty programs in Nebraska, although he may not deliver his message in person.

Exon has directed the Department of Public Welfare and the Technical Assistance Agency "to give me their thoughts and views" before he prepares his response for the Legislature.

Elimination Urged

Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff has proposed elimination of funding for programs of the federal Office of Economic Opportunity in the state.

The disputed LB63, also sponsored by Carpenter, provides that a county board must consider whether a proposed public gathering or entertainment is likely to be harmful to public health or welfare, or to the participants themselves, if a protest petition is submitted by at least 50 residents.

The board may set a hearing on the issue and, if it determines that the gathering may be harmful, it can go to court to seek a restraining order or an injunction

The court may then permanently enjoin the gathering or impose conditions as it directs.

BLAST WRECKS LOS ANGELES APARTMENT

A Los Angeles apartment house was wrecked Tuesday by an explosion that blew out four units of the building located near downtown. First indications were that the blast was a natural gas explosion, a fire department spokesman said. At least three persons were injured.

Construction Pact Effort Is A Failure

. . . Humphrey Opposes Controls

Washington (UPI) — The White House said Tuesday efforts voluntarily to restrain spiraling building costs apparently had failed, underscoring speculation that President Nixon may soon impose price-wage-profit controls on the construction industry.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said it now appears that a month-long effort to reach a voluntary agreement between contractors and the construction unions had been unproductive.

But he said Nixon would not make a decision on further action until he receives a report Thursday from the construction industry collective bargaining commission. Nixon created the commission Jan. 18 to negotiate a voluntary pact.

Humphrey Opposed

In Miami Beach, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., joined organized labor in opposing a possible freeze in the construction industry and accused the Nixon administration of flexing "its muscle."

"This is a piecemeal approach to what is a much bigger problem," Humphrey told newsmen after meeting with the AFLCIO executive council.

The former vice president said it was unfair to single out one industry in the fight against inflation, and added that the administration never saw fit "to put a wage and price freeze on interest rates that raped the country for two years."

AFL-CIO President George Meany said unions would exert "considerable resistance" to any freeze plan such as the one now under Nixonian consideration.

Humphrey said, "If there's to be a wage and price freeze, you've got to put it across the board, over the entire economy."

He said Nixon's economic record so far is a "colossal failure" that had "taken a terrible toll in economic production and human pride and dignity due to unemployment," now running at 6% of the labor force.

Hodgson Briefs Nixon

Labor Secretary James Hodgson briefed Nixon on the commission's recommendations Tuesday and planned to go to Miami Beach later in the week to talk to AFL-CIO leaders about the President's decision.

Ziegler did not dispute disclosures by Dr. John T. Dunlop, head of the commission, that wage and price controls were being seriously considered. Ziegler noted that Dunlop, dean of the faculty of Harvard University, had told Hodgson that a voluntary agreement appeared out of the question.

Dunlop met with officials attending the meeting of the executive council of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades department Monday, and sources said he made it clear that a wage-price freeze was the top alternative being considered by the administration.

According to the AFL-CIO sources, Dunlop said such a freeze would apply to the construction industry only. Even so, it would be a radical departure from Nixon's adamant refusal to use government controls to influence the economy.

Outright Freeze

There had been reports that Nixon would propose placing limitations on wage and price increases in the construction industry, and the report on Dunlop's conversation with AFL-CIO leaders was the first disclosure the administration was considering an outright freeze.

Congress gave the President authority to order wage-price controls last year, but Nixon said at the time he did not want the authority and did not intend to use it.

Since last year, however, building industry wage increases have averaged nearly 16% — about twice that of the rest of the economy.

According to AFL-CIO sources, Dunlop said the administration was considering creation of a special board to administer any controls that Nixon might order to regulate wage and price increases in the construction industry.

Officials Fail To Agree On CD Chief

. . . LT. GOV. MARSH SEEN AS COMPROMISE CHOICE

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Considerable discussion behind closed doors Tuesday apparently did not result in an agreeable choice for civil defense director for Lincoln and Lancaster County.

Indications were that the apparent stalemate might lead to the appointment of Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh as a compromise choice for the approximate $6,000 a year part-time post.

The comments from city council members and members of the county board after the some 45 minutes behind closed doors was that they were no further than they were last week when apparent dissension arose over the recommendation announced by Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf.

Mayor Schwartzkopf said he intends to make an appointment within the next few days and that there will definitely be a successor to Richard Vestecka, who resigned effective Jan. 7, by next week.

The city ordinance requires that the civil defense director be appointed by the mayor with approval of the City Council and upon an affirmative vote of the majority of the County Board.

Commissioner William Grossman told The Star that he told the closed meeting Tuesday that he had not made up his mind on a choice and would like to look at resumes of all applicants before making a judgment.

Last week Mayor Schwartzkopf presented a name to a joint meeting of the county board and city council but after considerable discussion the council did not choose to act on the recommendation.

Rumors around the County-City Building are that a compromise appointee may be named since there was apparently great dissension over the choice made by the Civil Defense Advisory Board and presented to the mayor.

According to some officials the name of Lt. Gov. Marsh has been prominently mentioned as a compromise appointee.

Marsh, who reportedly is strongly backed by at least one councilman, and John Ratliff, who has been supported openly by one county commissioner, were not, according to reliable sources, among the three nominees presented to the Civil Defense Advisory Board by the five-member committee who interviewed the applicants and studied confidential reports made on each.

Hoosier Senate Puts Safety First

Indianapolis (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has been forbidden to play golf when he comes to Indianapolis Friday to address a national conference on President Nixon's revenue-sharing plan.

The Indiana Senate, tongue in cheek, adopted a resolution banning Agnew from Indianapolis golf courses.

An Agnew drive hit three spectators in the Bob Hope Desert Classic last week at Palm Springs, Calif. He beaned pro golfer Doug Sanders in the same tournament a year ago.

Meanwhile, in Annapolis, the Maryland Senate, also kidding voiced the opinion that ex-Gov. Agnew should take his golf clubs to the moon to determine if there is any life there.

"If there is doubt as to the existence of life on the Earth's satellite," said a senate resolution adopted Tuesday, "should not Mr. Agnew be sent on the next moon shot with his trusty clubs to seek out the moon people with a golf ball?"

U.S. Planes Attack Enemy Radar Sites

Saigon (AP) — American fighter-bombers attacked surface-to-air missile sites Tuesday 160 miles south of Hanoi, the U.S. Command announced. It was the deepest penetration of North Vietnamese territory in three successive days of strikes against enemy SAMs.

Headquarters said Wednesday two Navy A6 Intruders escorting an unarmed reconnaissance jet fired Shrike missiles at enemy radar positions six miles north-northeast of Vinh, a coastal city across the breadth of North Vietnam from the Laotian border and 119 miles north of the demilitarized zone.

The command said results were not known.

Strikes on the previous two days were against SAM sites near the border to protect B52 bombers on forays against enemy supply routes in Laos in support of the South Vietnamese ground thrust into the southern part of that country.

Hours before the new attacks, U.S. military officials announced the possibility of more strikes against SAM sites to guard the B52s on their raids against mountain supply passes.

Tuesday's attacks were the 13th and 14th "protective reaction" strikes inside North Vietnam reported by the U.S. Command this year — more than were reported during all of last year.

The A6 pilots said they did not observe any SAMs fired at them or at the reconnaissance plane, but their electronics gear told them enemy radar was tracking them — a step preparatory to firing.

The command's protective reaction policy gives American pilots the right to strike first under those circumstances.

Bad weather and increased North Vietnamese attacks have slowed the South Vietnamese advance into southern Laos. The Saigon command reported Tuesday a gain of little more than a mile in the past three days.

Most of the enemy attacks were aimed at the 9,000 U.S. troops acting as a blocking force on the South Vietnamese side of the border in the northern sector of the country.

Council Fails To Override Veto Of 70th And A Zoning

By TOM EKVALL
Star Staff Writer

The controversial 70th and A rezoning for an office park and townhouse complex was stymied Tuesday when a City Council vote to override the mayor's veto of the zoning failed by one vote.

Council members voted 4 to 3 in favor of the rezoning, but five votes were needed to override the veto.

The key vote was cast by Council Chairman Ervin Peterson, who was among the five voting for the zoning change last week and the only one to switch Tuesday. Peterson joined council members Mrs. Helen Boosalis and Tom Allman in opposing the zoning.

Peterson, who commented he was not "really sold on the zoning in the first place," said he had received more calls on this zoning than on any other matter before the council from people opposing the council's decision last week to grant the zoning.

"It seems like people are more appreciative of good zoning principles," Peterson said, adding that when he voted for the zoning last week he felt that the people were demanding a more progressive attitude and "I decided to go along."

Much of the controversy and opposition to the proposed $3.5 million development has centered on plans to zone land for commercial use, especially a gas station as contemplated by the developers.

Efforts to override the mayor's veto were headed by Councilman Bill Davidson, who indicated the matter may not be over yet since even though his side lost, those supporting the rezoning constituted a majority and in his view were on the prevailing side.

Davidson said that under parliamentary procedure a member of the prevailing side may bring up an item for reconsideration the following week.

City Atty. Dick Wood said he would rule this week what constitutes being on the prevailing side.

Opposition to the zoning was voiced by Kenneth Clark, a resident in the area and an architect, who commented that approval of the zoning would "perpetuate mistakes in city planning over the last many years."

Meanwhile, Lloyd Marti, an attorney for the developers G & G Corp., pointed out that all agreements between the city and the developers have been signed in writing as well as the deed to the land being executed, containing restrictive covenants binding the developers to the proposed development, as requested by the council.

Committee Holds Onto Bill To Buy Pershing

By The Associated Press

Reversing a position taken only hours earlier, the Education Committee of the Unicameral Tuesday decided to hold for the time being a bill which would have the state buy the now-defunct Pershing College and run the facility as a vocational-technical college.

The action came only hours after the committee had voted 5-3 to kill LB108, Beatrice Sen. Fred Carstens' measure which would have Nebraska buy the Pershing grounds at a cost estimated by Carstens at $900,000.

The kill action was taken in an executive session but in a later executive session, after giving public hearings to several bills, the committee reversed itself and voted 7-1 to reconsider LB108.

The decision then was to hold the bill for later consideration.

Several bills are coming before the committee in later weeks which would, if approved, establish a statewide system of vocational schools.

The committee also decided to hold for one week LB287, the controversial bill which would require mandatory school redistricting.

In an unrelated action, the committee voted to kill LB142, Scottsbluff Sen. Terry Carpenter's bill to provide admission priority at the University of Nebraska Medical School to students who sign a promise agreeing to practice in Nebraska at least three years.

The NU Board of Regents has been considering various methods to keep more medical school graduates in the state and had asked the committee last month to hold off action on the bill until the regents could report to the committee.

Laird Says Operations In Laos Going Well

(C) New York Times News Service

Washington — Secretary of State Rogers and Defense Secretary Laird briefed President Nixon and the Cabinet Tuesday on the progress of the South Vietnamese Laotian operations. The operation is going well, Laird said, but he warned that greater enemy resistance can be expected.

Decision 'Unacceptable' To U.S.

Washington — Israel's decision to build housing projects on former Jordanian land in Jerusalem was termed "unacceptable" by the State Department because the housing could affect the final status of the city, which is a major point in the negotiations between Jordan and Israel.

Freeze Possible

Washington — High government officials acknowledged the possibility that President Nixon might impose a wage and price freeze on the construction industry. (More on Page 1.)

Output Goes Up A Little

Washington — Industrial production rose in January, but the increase was largely attributed to the recovery in automobile production following the General Motors strike. Although the index rose 0.7% to 165.1% of the 1957-59 average, it had not yet regained its pre-strike level, which was considered a setback to Nixon administration hopes and predictions.

Drug Pushing Involves Thousands

New York — Thousands of young Americans have become part of the largest illegal commercial operation since bootleg liquor — drug dealing. Every college dormitory has its "friendly dope peddler" and every rock festival has its vendors. Marijuana and hashish move to every part of the country by almost any conceivable mode of transportation and the annual trade is estimated at $1 billion.

7% Sales Tax Requested

Hartford, Conn. — Gov. Thomas J. Meskill of Connecticut asked for a 2% increase in the state's sales tax and urged that it be applied to many items now exempt. Such a rise, to 7%, would give Connecticut the highest sales tax in the country. Meskill also asked for increases in liquor and cigarette taxes.

New City Money Raiser Proposed

New York — Creation of a national corporation to raise $10 billion to begin development of 100 new cities was proposed by David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank. The corporation would work with a new federal agency empowered to acquire tracts of rural land for the development of the new cities before the end of the century.

Manhunt On In Murder Of 3 Deputies

World News

Dallas (AP) — Texas law officers pressed a search Tuesday for an ex-convict wanted in connection with the kidnap-slaying of three sheriff's deputies in Dallas.

Five officers were kidnaped Monday, three of them killed, one wounded and a fifth escaped unharmed in a rain of bullets.

"It was a needless killing . . . an execution," said Dallas County Sheriff Clarence Jones.

A manhunt was on for Rene Adolpho Guzman, 33, charged with murdering one of the slain deputies. Charges were to be filed against a second man in custody.

The dead officers are Dallas County Deputies William D. Reese, 31, and Sam Infante, 32, and Ellis County Deputy A. J. Robertson, 59.

Dallas County Deputy A. D. McCurley, 50, escaped harm while Ellis County Deputy Wendell Dover, 49, received gunshot wounds in the chest. He was reported in fair condition.

'Thinks He's Al Capone'

One of Guzman's relatives picked up for questioning told Justice of the Peace Tom Naylor: "He (Guzman) is a mean man, a real mean man. He thinks he's Al Capone."

Sheriff Jones said: "He (Guzman) knows he's an ex-con who'd have trouble running, so we are certain he's still out there."

Guzman has a lengthy arrest and prison record dating back to 1959. He was released last June after serving a prison sentence on a burglary conviction.

A dragnet was established along the Texas-Mexican border by officers who theorized Guzman might try to enter Mexico.

How It Happened

McCurley said the killings occurred this way.

Infante had accompanied Dover and Robertson to a West Dallas address to investigate a burglary which had occurred in Ellis County. The officers carried an arrest warrant and were admitted to the house by two men. Later, they called the sheriff's office and asked for another form pertaining to search of the home. McCurley and Reese brought the form.

"There was nothing suspicious when we arrived," McCurley said. They knocked on the door and a voice said, "Come in."

The officers stepped inside and saw the three other officers bound to chairs. McCurley and Reese were overpowered and trussed by two gunmen.

The gunmen forced all five officers into one of their squad cars and ordered them to drive to the Trinity River which bisects Dallas.

Tried To Ram Cars

Infante tried ramming passing cars three times, but each time one of the men shoved a gun in his stomach," McCurley said.

Much of the abductor's conversation was in Spanish, understood only by Infante and the gunmen.

When they reached the river bottomlands, Infante turned to his fellow officers and said, "This is it. They're going to kill us now."

Reese pleaded: "There is no reason to kill us now; you have our guns."

"No. You can identify us," said one gunman.

Reese tried to punch one gunman who carried two pistols.

He missed. The gunman opened fire and Reese slumped to the ground.

Bullets And Screams

McCurley dived over an embankment. Bullets and screams ripped the air. "I could hear hollering and shooting up above," he said.

McCurley fought his way through underbrush to a highway where a motorist picked him and and took him to a service station. "I called the police and borrowed the attendant's .22 derringer," he said.

McCurley went back to the murder scene where he found Dover, wounded and in shock, stumbling through the brush. They also found Reese, Robertson and Infante sprawled in pools of blood.

Colonel Meted 3-Year Term, $15,000 Fine

Saigon (AP) — A U.S. Air Force squadron commander was sentenced Tuesday to three years in prison and fined $15,000 for smoking marijuana, asking a sergeant in his squadron to get him some marijuana and giving some to four enlisted men.

Col. Gerald V. Kehrli, 46, of Willmar, Minn., highest U.S. officer to be tried in Vietnam, was found guilty of seven marijuana offenses by a general court-martial composed of a brigadier general and seven colonels.

Artists Supported

New York (UPI) — About 30 pickets — one of them carrying a sign reading "be patriotic, burn a flag" — demonstrated in front of the U.S. Courthouse in Foley Square in support of three artists accused of desecrating the American flag.

Sanity Board Finds Calley Normal

Ft. Benning, Ga. (AP) —A government sanity board found Lt. William L. Calley Jr. "normal in every respect," it was revealed Tuesday as his My Lai court-martial resumed.

At the same time, the defense dropped its theory that marijuana may have been factor in the alleged 1968 massacre of Vietnam civilians.

After a month's interruption to allow for the court-ordered sanity hearing, the government returned to the small brick courthouse on this vast infantry post with a renewed attack on Dr. Albert LaVerne, a defense psychiatrist.

LaVerne suggested that Calley, 27, could have been under the influence of marijuana smoked in his presence by others, although he himself was described as a nonuser of the drug.

"Let me ask the defense this," the trial judge, Col. Reid W. Kennedy, interjected at one point in the current legal argument.

"Since you have the report of the sanity board and since it is thoroughly apparent from this that Lt. Calley was normal in every respect, does that change your attitude toward proceeding with Dr. LaVerne?"

"This has nothing to do with marijuana," replied chief defense attorney George Latimer, referring to the report of a three-man Walter Reed Hospital sanity board. They spent a week examining Calley in Washington and additional time during the recess preparing their report.

Latimer pointed out that LaVerne's theory was that marijuana smoked in a closed room could produce drug intoxication in a nonsmoking occupant, without his even being aware he was affected by the fumes.

"You don't have too many closed rooms in Vietnam," Kennedy observed.

"I've tried to see if I could place Lt. Calley in a closed room, and I couldn't honestly do it," Latimer replied.

Tate Case Jurors To Live At Home

Los Angeles (AP) — Jurors in the Sharon Tate murder trial, locked up nightly for seven months to avoid exposure to possibly prejudicial publicity, were told Tuesday they can live at home during the remaining days of the sentencing hearing.

Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older acted after a woman alternate juror fainted while being sworn in to replace a juror who said he had to go home for personal reasons.

Major Banks Cut Prime Rate To 5¾%

New York (AP) — Consumers can look forward to a further lowering of interest charges on personal loans and home mortgages, economists said, as many major banks Tuesday cut their prime lending rate for the fourth time this year.

The rate charged on loans to the biggest corporate borrowers was trimmed to 5¾% from 6%. It has descended steadily from a record 8½% in March 1970 in a reflection of a more ample supply of lending funds.

"The consumer should continue to benefit from the lower rates," said Francis H. Schott, economist for the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Sam Nakagama, Argus Research Corp. economist, said the drop in the prime rate "makes it more attractive for banks to push installment and mortgage loans."

The Federal Housing Administration home mortgage loan rate has dropped from 8½% to 7½% in recent months.

The latest cut in the prime rate was initiated by Bankers Trust Co. of New York. It followed by four days the approval by the Federal Reserve Board of a reduction to 4¾% from 5% in the discount rate of 11 of the 12 district reserve banks. The discount rate is the interest charged by the Federal Reserve System on loans to member banks.

Demo Reform Vote Favors Big States

Washington (AP) — A Democratic reform commission voted Tuesday to give large industrial states a dominant role in the party's 1972 nominating convention.

But the action of the group headed by Rep. James G. O'Hara, D-Mich., is expected to precipitate a sharp fight at a meeting Friday of the Democratic National Committee.

It also is subject to approval by the executive committee, which meets Wednesday.

The delegate apportionments formula approved by the O'Hara commission would take into equal account a state's population and its vote for Democratic presidential candidates in the last three elections.

The result is to give substantial increases to large states, mostly in the East and Midwest, and to reduce the smaller states' representation which was enhanced by the delegate formula used in the past.

For example, the eight largest states — New York, California, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, Texas and New Jersey — would have more than half of the approximately 3,000 delegates.

Before adopting the formula by voice vote, the commission rejected 8 to 6 a proposal by Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, to substitute Electoral College strength for population in the formula, thus giving greater strength to the smaller states.

Nebraska would have 21 delegates to the national convention under the reform commission's action, compared with 30 voting delegates in 1968.

Author's Role Satisfies Ex-Salesman, Farmer

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska News

Brock — After two decades as a sales engineer followed by two as a dirt farmer, John G. Haberman has decided it's more satisfying to be an author.

One year ago, at a sprightly age 71, he published a first book which surprised even the writer with its success. Within four months he had sold an initial printing of 10,000 copies — and is now well along on a second 10,000.

The $2 paperback has brought case lot orders from all over the country, especially from strongholds of the National Farmers Organization (NFO). All 168 pages of "The Meat in the Agricultural Coconut'' reflect that group's philosophies.

But the publication is considerably more than an organization manual. It combines bits of anthropology, economics and philosophy.

"Some key NFO people have distributed the book to practically every agricultural campus," said the Saline County native "But I didn't consult anyone in the organization about its writing. It's my own ideas about selling, from my experiences both as a salesman and a farmer."

Tired Of Rat Race

A 1923 electrical engineering graduate of the University of Nebraska, Haberman sold in the petroleum and electrical fields until "tiring of the rat race" in 1948. He then bought the quarter section two miles west of Brock where he reared four children and still lives today.

Renting his land the past couple of years, the white-mustached oldster has found more time for the combination shop-study in his farmyard. The book required 1½ years of writing "preceded by quite a little research."

"What struck me after I started farming was that for 20 years I had made the deals, I had priced my product, I had negotiated the contracts," he reflected. "Then I suddenly found myself the typical farmer — more of a panhandler than a businessman.

"The answer to the farmer's problem is so simple it's been overlooked. He just needs his own price-tagging the same as other parts of the capitalistic process from school teachers to garbage haulers."

Contending that farmers "should have been handed their production diplomas long ago," Haberman believes technology has been over-stressed at the expense of marketing. He particularly takes agricultural colleges to task for this.

Disputes Expansion Trend

He also disputes the trend to farm expansion, noting that "I was never bitten with the bug of accumulation and big production."

An NFO member since 1960, Haberman has attended eight national and five state conventions. He serves as treasurer of the Nemaha County chapter

This spring he and wife Doris will see their daughter, Martha, become their fourth offspring to graduate from the University of Nebraska. John holds a Ph.D. and is a consulting analytical chemist in Cincinnati, while Joe is a civilian mathematician with the Navy in California. Mrs. Susan Lathrum, a fine arts graduate, is now a New Orleans housewife.

Home Adoptions Pass 200 Mark

Omaha — For the third straight year, adoptions from Nebraska Children's Home Society have passed the 200 mark. The figures for 1970 have been compiled and according to Harris Van Oort, executive director, increases have been noted in many of the services offered by the society.

As the leader in the adoption field, 202 children were placed with new parents throughout the state. The society cared for 205 unwed mothers in 1970. A total of 156,024 days care was provided by the society for these two services.

Also included this past year is a vast amount of temporary care in emergency cases involving various courts throughout the state. According to Van Oort, over 1,100 cases of special services were also recorded by the society.

The new contract will become effective in September when Krasnapolsky's present one-year contract expires.

Salary terms were not revealed, although it was announced that the conductor had been given a raise.

American Army Deserter Jailed In East Germany

The New York Times

Berlin — United States authorities said Tuesday an American Army deserter was in jail in East Germany on charges of having sought to flee that country.

The American, identified as Ronald Balch, 24, of Huntsville, Ala., deserted from his unit in Bamberg, West Germany, in March, 1966, to go to East Germany.

Last year he attempted to flee but was captured by East German guards. In August, 1970, a court at Frankfurt-on-Oder sentenced him to two years and eight months in jail.

International Open House Sunday On East Campus

Agriculture and foreign relations will play a major role in the International Open House planned for Sunday on the East Campus of the University of Nebraska.

The University 4-H club and some 80 young Japanese farmers who have spent the summer working on farms in Nebraska are participating in a program to show the role the university plays in international relations.

Students from the Colombian program and other nations and American groups interested in better international relations are involved in the program.

The mayor's Committee for International Friendship and the Host Family Committee, which cares for foreign students in Lincoln, will be on hand to explain their programs.

"You will have an opportunity to visit with a large number of students from many lands as well as with Americans who have returned from stays in other nations," reports Mrs. Doris Steele, Lincoln, who is acting as publicity chairman of the program.

Czechs To Attend

Nebraska's Czechs will be there too with handicrafts and costumes from the state's 'Czech capitol' at Wilber.

The Campfire Girls are planning to set up a French cafe with soft drinks for the visitors.

The entire program will be open to the public from 2 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Special invitations have been sent to many organizations in Nebraska. Mrs. Steele is hoping to fill the East Campus Activities Building with exhibits and people.

Dr. John D. Orr, associate state 4-H leader said, "This activity should interest adults and young people from all walks of life. There is no charge whatever; this is an activity every Nebraskan can take part in."

Elementary School Construction OK'd

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday night gave the go-ahead to construction of a new elementary school near 76th and Leighton.

The board set March 25 as the bid date for the new facility and named board member John Lux chairman of a committee to recommend a name for the school.

In other action during a meeting at Northeast High School, the board approved plans for 1971 summer sessions and named Mrs. Clara Rottman supervisor of media services for the district.

Attending the meeting was a large contingent of citizens, many of whom were apparently interested in the plans for the new school.

The facility will help relieve crowded conditions in schools in the northeast part of the city.

Supt. John Prasch told the board, before it voted without dissent to approve the plans, that action at the meeting would probably increase chances of completing construction in time for the 1972 fall session.

Prasch told parents that the school is being designed on the "open classroom concept," although he said provisions for movable partitions will also permit "single classroom teaching if desired."

Designed for an enrollment of 660, the school will be air-conditioned and carpeted and will have few windows.

Answering a question from the audience, Prasch said windowless classrooms result in fewer distractions in the instructional program.

Architect R. O. Freeman also noted that air-conditioning is "much less costly" in buildings with few windows.

The district's 1971 summer school will be similar to last year's program, according to Ronald Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction.

Classes will run from June 10 to July 22 at East High for secondary students and at 11 schools for elementary students.

In addition, music and driver education courses will be offered at all four high schools.

The board was told that summer enrollment has steadily increased over the years.

The appointment of Mrs. Rottman moves her from acting supervisor to supervisor of the media services effectively immediately.

In other matters, the board:

—heard that jump in the assessed valuation of property in the district will result in a $300,000 reduction in state aid, assuming the state aid law remains the same.
—heard a report on special education programs for the emotionally disturbed
—met in executive session for nearly 1½ hours to discuss the board's negotiating position for contract talks with Lincoln teachers.

Violinist's Performance With Symphony A Treat

By RICHARD GRACE

Itzhak Perlman was the featured artist at the Lincoln Symphony Concert Tuesday evening, and he immediately proved he possessed the technique, tone and interpretive knowledge so necessary for a great violinist.

Perlman's virtuoso abilities were brilliantly displayed in Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole, but the rich, warm and powerful tone along with his poetic realization of Lalo's music were equally evident. This provided a large Stuart Theatre audience with one of those rare treats in musical enjoyment.

As the title implies, Lalo originally gave this "concerto" a four-movement pattern of a symphony but at the request of Pablo de Sarasate, a Spanish violinist for whom he wrote the composition, Lalo inserted an additional movement — Intermezzo based on a habenera rhythm.

Many times this movement is omitted from performance but Perlman, ably accompanied by the Lincoln Symphony, played all five movements. It is difficult to choose the outstanding movement of the composition except perhaps for the extremely elaborate Rondo fifth movement where Perlman's virtuoso abilities were ever-present.

But in reality the violinist's intensity and musicianship kept one in awe of his greatness throughout the entire work.

The first part of the program featured two other frequently performed works from orchestra literature — The Symphony No. 4 in A major by Mendelssohn and the Lincoln Portrait by Copland.

The Mendelssohn piece had some pleasurable moments but the players and their conductor did not always achieve the crispness and decisiveness that the composition demands. This weakness was more noticeable in the quieter development sections; for example in the first movement where the transparent orchestration needs these qualities of musicianship.

The highlight of the evening for the Lincoln Symphony was the exciting and powerful interpretation of the Lincoln Portrait. Ably narrated by Durwood Varner, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, the conductor, Leo Kopp and an enlarged ensemble of symphony players provided the listeners with an exciting rendition of this strong American piece which employed letters and speeches of Lincoln, concluding with the Gettyburg Address.

The brass and percussion sections were outstanding in the more "forte" passages of the work but also prominent was some beautiful solo trumpet passages by Dennis Schneider.

Shooting Victim Sees Gunman In Adjoining Bed

Atlanta, Ga. (AP) — A week ago Tuesday, Leverial Chase of McDonough was shot during the holdup of a service station where he was night operator. He was admitted to Grady Hospital in serious condition.

Friday, another patient who had been shot was admitted ot Grady and assigned th bed next to Chase.

Chase said he thought he looked familiar. So familiar, in fact, that when his wardmate was visited by another man, " Chase told his wife, "Those are the two men who shot me."

Law enforcement officers were summoned and the second patient, identified as Rudolphus Penson, 22, Altanta, was charged with armed robbery and assault with intent to kill.

His visitor had already left. He is being sought.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

AFL-CIO President George Meany has an understandable dislike for President Nixon's economic policies. There is some truth to the statement by Meany that the President's fight against inflation has failed and has been waged at the expense of the American working man.

Actually, the category of the American working man would have to be enlarged considerably from what it has characteristically been if the Meany statement is to remain true. The ranks of the unemployed have certainly been swelled by a wide range of professional men, including many middle management and scientific personnel.

The point of argument with Meany is that he proposes nothing as an alternative. This, however, is a weakness shared by just about every critic on the economic scene today. No one has been able to come up with an answer that holds much real promise of success in halting inflation and spurring employment.

★

Meany even contributes to the inflationary pressure by coming out in support of a $2 minimum wage. The times may well make a $2 minimum wage a practical thing but that is not the place to stop in the matter.

The rise in recent years from a $1 to a $1.60 minimum wage has itself been a contribution to inflation and unemployment. An increase now to a $2 minimum wage may be proper from a humanitarian point of view but it would be another contribution to both inflation and unemployment.

Perhaps, too, the minimum wage situation is one small example of what has happened and continues to happen in this nation. On the whole, the country moves constantly toward a higher standard of living. But every inch forward is accompanied by a corresponding increase in aspirations.

Apparently it is a characteristic of the human race always to want a little more than it has. Former Governor Norbert Tiemann once said, in a remark that hurt him politically, that he had never seen a happy farmer.

★

The governor might well have said that he has never seen a happy citizen, farmer or otherwise. The statement is an expression to be carefully considered, not taken literally.

What it means is that everyone seeks to improve himself. This is the kind of system we have; it is the essence of the free enterprise system. It is called motivation and that is what we operate on.

We rely upon financial gain as the basic motivation for what we do. A man works hard and, in the process, expects to reap a financial reward for it. As a result, he improves his standard of living.

Only after this fundamental matter has been satisfied does one turn to other considerations such as peace of mind, challenging work, pleasant working conditions, etc. A lot of people may argue with this but there is no question of its truth in at least one degree or another.

★

Two consequences of this present us with problems. First, as the economy expands, those who fail to share in it are left further and further behind. The man with no car didn't feel so badly when a lot of people rode the bus but the man without a car today feels he is deprived of one of the essential elements of life.

The family who lived in a rented home all their lives didn't feel so badly when their position was shared by many friends and neighbors. But the couple today who cannot buy a home soon after marriage feel deprived of a fundamental right to happiness.

The gap between the rich and the poor widens as the economy expands because the poor do not share in the affluence of the others. Secondly, the matter of aspirations is an important factor. People not only want to be better off, but they want to be in a better position relative to others than they have been.

A growing and expanding economy has many benefits but it has, too, many liabilities which we have not yet come to fully understand, much less to know how to cope with. Meany may have some justification for criticism of the administration but he has not yet gotten down himself to the meat and potatoes of things.

Majority Of The CIA Are No James Bonds

WASHINGTON — The popular impression of CIA men in Southeast Asia is of lean-faced James Bonds talking in whispers to Indochinese beauties in dingy bars or of bearded guerrilla experts directing Meo tribesmen in the Laotian jungles.

The real McCoy, more often, is a rumpled civil servant going to lard, who worries about when his refrigerator will arrive from the States and plays bingo on Tuesday nights.

This is the unromantic picture that emerges from an instruction sheet handed to CIA pilots leaving for Udorn, Thailand. The CIA uses a front called Air America to fly missions out of Udorn over Indochina.

Instead of pressing cyanide suicide capsules upon new recruits, the stateside briefer slips them a bus schedule for CIA personnel between Udorn's CIA compound, schools and banks.

"A bowling alley in Udorn has league bowling," the CIA confides to its pilot-agents. Their wives are given such hush-hush CIA tips as "water should be boiled three to five minutes prior to drinking, but it is safe for cooking and washing dishes if it is brought to the boiling point."

Wives are also advised to bring "plenty of sheets and pillow cases" and "chinaware, tableware and kitchen utensiles."

Other confidential information provided CIA agents includes the intelligence that "Thai mattresses are normally extremely hard and bumpy" and that "shopping is generally done by the servants due to the early hours (6 a.m.) one must shop to insure getting fresh products."

The cloak-and-dagger boys are told they will have a supermarket, swimming pool, free movies, the "Club Rendezvous" (which doubles as a chapel on Sundays) and bingo on Tuesday and Saturday nights. The CIA bars are called The Pub and the Wagon Wheel and shut down at midnight.

One lonely CIA flier, who had left his family in Florida, worried about their safety after reading about racial demonstrations at home. "I'm going to bring them out here where it's safe," he confided solemnly to my associate, Les Whitten, in Vientiane last summer.

But if the CIA living conditions are vintage suburbia, some of the missions are dangerous. The CIA pilots fly supplies to CIA-backed Meo tribesmen in Laos hinterlands. There are also more hazardous missions, such as flights along the Red Chinese border and ammo deliveries to tiny airstrips in communist-infested country.

Footnote: Much of the recruiting for CIA pilots is done out of a modern, gold-carpeted office in downtown Washington with "Air America" on the glass doors. One of my reporters, posing as a pilot, was interviewed by H. H. Dawson, a beefy man in shirt sleeves. He said prospects were dim right now, because the number of fixed-wing pilots had been cut back from 600 to 500.

Dawson said the basic pay is $22.98 an hour for captains, $13.93 for first officers, with bonuses for special "projects." A top CIA pilot can make as much as $100,000 a year flying high hazard missions. In addition, station allowances run $320 a month at Saigon, $215 at Udorn and $230 in Vientiane.

Advance In Laos

Some 13,000 South Vietnamese troops are now occupying a position in Laos along the famed Ho Chi Minh trail and thousands more are fighting the communist enemy in Cambodia. The situation raises a rather curious question about national security in the world today.

These troops are where they are for the announced intention of securing their own land of South Vietnam. But on this basis, we would have war throughout the world.

On such a premise, Russia could cross into Red China, Israel could cross the Suez Canal and all the frontiers of Europe could be in turmoil. The theory is that for the sake of its own internal security, South Vietnam has the right to pursue its enemy into foreign lands.

The truth is that it is in these foreign lands only because they are too weak to do anything about it. In the case of Cambodia, there is also some agreement with the ruling government there but even this agreement stems from a fundamental military weakness.

If South Vietnam can put these thousands of troops into neighboring lands and wage successful war against the enemy, you have to wonder why it cannot now defend itself and American troops be returned home. And you have to wonder, if present operations are essential, whether total security against communism must be achieved in Laos and Cambodia before South Vietnam can attain a full measure of security.

Certainly, one or the other of these questions would appear to be legitimate in view of what is now happening in Asia. We can only hope that the theory of internal security from external aggression is not one that gains favor throughout the world. The American position in Asia is not in all regards a very laudable one.

The Army Gets Tough

The charge was smoking and possessing marijuana, asking enlisted men in his squadron to obtain it for him and giving marijuana to men in his unit. The defendant, a senior officer of 28 years service in the U.S. Air Force, commander of a military airlift squadron in Vietnam.

Tuesday, 46-year-old Col. Gerald V. Kehrli, the highest-ranking U.S. officer to face a court martial in Vietnam and the highest-ranking ever tried on narcotics charges, was found guilty of all but one of the eight charges against him and was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $15,000.

During the four days of testimony before the court, witnesses said Kehrli told them he smoked marijuana because it "was a good thing and allowed him to understand his men and close the generation gap."

The Army is concerned, as are civilian officials, over the proliferation of pot smoking and drug abuse among servicemen in Vietnam. If it were marijuana alone, officials might not be as concerned, but it is believed that addiction to and abuse of hard drugs have contributed to a definite decline in the efficiency of the fighting men and has been a factor in the collapse of his morale as well. Perhaps the Army was making an example of Col. Kehrli in order to demonstrate that the higher echelons in reality will not tolerate such activity.

Military justice does not act with such great dispatch or efficiency in other areas; that of war crimes, for instance.

Witnesses to the incident, the Army command, congressional investigators and President Nixon himself, have said that a massacre of civilians of terrible proportions took place at My Lai in South Vietnam over two years ago. The Army has not gotten around to finding out who was responsible for it. The issue, if left unresolved, will bolster the proposition that it is all right for U.S. servicemen to act like a bunch of Nazi storm troopers, but pot smoking will not be condoned.

Senator Begins Check On Privacy Invasion Represented By Vast Data Computer Banks

WASHINGTON — Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., the scourge of the snoopers, is about to open hearings on the proliferation of data banks and it's none too soon. Every day, new disclosures make it more imperative that safeguards be imposed on computer storage and distribution of personal information.

Last week, for instance, Deputy Attorney General Richard Kliendienst told the American Bar Association that the Justice Department had made 253 applications to federal courts in 1969 and 1970 to make electronic "interceptions" — wiretaps and bugs. As a result, he said, there had been over 800 arrests and 72 convictions and all but 12 of the applications had been "productive."

These statistics show that more than 700 persons were arrested but have not yet been convicted of any crime. Unquestionably, a high proportion of these persons never will or should be convicted; yet, under present practices, their arrest records will go into government files, which now means a computer data-processing center.

☆ ☆ ☆

These records will then become instantly available to hundreds of state, local and private agencies—even in some cases to prospective employers—few of which are under any particular strictures about their privacy or as to how they may be used.

Moreover, 253 applications to bug and tap must have resulted in literally thousands of conversations being intercepted, and Kliendienst said most of the applications had been "productive." This means that an untoward amount of unprocessed and unverified data on individuals, not all of it leading to arrests and not all of them necessarily criminals, also is finding its way to the waiting computers.

☆ ☆ ☆

But that is just the beginning. New Jersey, which put an eavesdropping law into effect in 1969, has just reported that, in the second year of operations, its agents tripled the number of wiretaps they conducted. In 1970, New Jersey officers alone recorded 24,192 conversations, of which 19,443 were reported to be incriminating; 287 arrests resulted, but no conviction data were given. New Jersey is one of only 12 states with eavesdrop laws, but the American Bar Association is urging the other 38 to get cracking at the earphones. So the raw material to go into the data banks, for distribution to interested agencies and persons, is accumulating rapidly.

☆ ☆ ☆

The police are not the only eager collectors. Senator Ervin already has disclosed that the Dragon Lady of the State Department, Director Frances Knight of the passport office, has at her disposal a computer bank of 243,135 names of persons considered — not necessarily proven — to be subversive or to fail to "reflect credit" on the United States. And how much do we know about the links, official or unacknowledged, between state and federal agencies and private concerns — credit bureaus, for instance — that collect data on individuals for computer storage? Very little.

Kliendienst said the Justice Department interceptions were directed at organized crime, so it may seem quixotic to object to gathering, storing and distributing data on those engaged in that nefarious field. But the question is whether this is being done under rules that give maximum protection to innocent people.

An arrest, for example, is not proof of guilt; thousands of totally innocent people are arrested every year but are never convicted. Yet the arrest record becomes a permanent liability that can hound an innocent person throughout his life. Even the F.B.I. tacitly concedes this by its policy of expunging arrest records from its files — but only when notified by the arresting agency that no conviction resulted, a notification local police seldom bother to make.

Dr. Alan F. Westin of Columbia University, the director of a study on data-bank implications, said in a speech at Dickinson College last week that computer technology itself made possible data processing systems that would automatically wipe out certain obsolete records, record all requests for and distribution of data, notify the individual concerned of such transactions, and otherwise safeguard computer information and its use. This may well be the most potent suggestion Senator Ervin's subcommittee will hear.

Hospital Costs

South Korea

I am presently serving in the armed forces in South Korea. I subscribe to The Lincoln Star but it takes eight to 10 days for me to receive it. As a result, these comments may seem a bit late, but I feel that I must say something nonetheless.

In the Jan. 28 issue was a story regarding the recent room rate increase at Lincoln General Hospital. It is my opinion that these increases are not justified at this time — or at least not for the reasons given.

Let's examine some facts regarding hospitals.

Intensive care units are, by their very nature, losers for a hospital in a cost-to-income analysis. They are seldom if ever filled to capacity with the type of patients they are designed for. They require a great deal of expensive and sophisticated equipment and a staff of well-trained and efficient personnel.

What about the younger patient who requires this kind of service? Many insurance companies do not cover the full cost of intensive care facilities. Thus, the patient must pay for the difference out of his own pocket — and this is often a great deal of money. This amount is often difficult if not impossible to collect and the resultant loss is written off to bad debts where it will help to justify a future rate increase.

Another "losing" function of a hospital is the delivery room which must be staffed full-time to handle deliveries at any time. This results in costs which far exceed income. Naturally the answer seems to be, "Raise the charges." Or is it?

For families who are established in the community and who have insurance, there is no problem with increased charges (except in the inflationary sense) since their insurance companies will cover them. But what about the young couple which lacks insurance or whose insurance hasn't been in effect long enough to cover delivery room charges? They are now faced with a higher charge, albeit only $10 more, but that is only one of the many higher charges.

If we were to consider an increase in the number of births at Lincoln General for the upcoming year equal to the increase for last year, 16.5 per cent (which is unlikely), we would find that the increase in delivery room charges would result in an additional $13,000 income if it were all collected (which is also unlikely). To a hospital the size of Lincoln General, $13,000 is not going to make much difference. Witness their monthly bad debt reports.

The increase in the emergency room service charge is another example of misguided logic. Emergency room charges are always difficult to collect, even from insurance companies. So if a hospital finds itself unable to collect a large percentage of eight-dollar emergency room charges, how does it hope to solve the problem by raising the charge to $10? Forcing the "good-paying" patient to pay more to help cover the losses of the "non-paying" patient is not in the best interests of the community.

It seems that the hospital could come up with better and more efficient means of collecting accounts instead of saddling reasonable patients with additional charges as the increase in room rates will do. The alternatives should all be carefully considered and an increase in rates should be only the last alternative after all else has been exhausted.

This carefully contrived plan of rate increases coming just before the construction of the new floor seems to indicate an alternative reason. It would seem that the board and the administration of Lincoln General Hospital want to expand the existing facilities without taking on any long-term debt. They can do this by paying for it out of an increased annual profit. This is good for the hospital but bad for the community since they must pay for the expansion through increased charges.

This burden on the community is unnecessary at this time. Better internal procedures for collection of accounts, staffing, purchasing and management could well be utilized to offset these "higher costs."

I feel that the people of Lincoln and the City Council would do well to question Lincoln General's new rate increases. I would demand to see a real justification for them and I would want an open discussion of actual costs, generated income, collected income, projected income and projected costs. I would carefully examine any statistics used in this justification.

Lincoln General Hospital has served the community of Lincoln for many years and it is dedicated to excellent patient care. The board of trustees and the administration of Lincoln General would do well to reassure themselves that that remains their prime concern. The finest patient care and facilities are of little value if no one can afford to pay for them.

Up And Down

Bancroft, Neb.

Governor J. J. Exon is up to the old trick of saying one thing and doing another. In his budget this year, Governor Exon proposes an across-the-board $300 pay raise for all state employes. The governor has taken great effort to tell everyone of his endeavors to lower the salaries of his key aides and department heads. At the same time, the governor's salary is being raised from $18,000 to $25,000, an increase of $7,000.

It appears that Mr. Exon has lowered the salaries of others just about enough to cover his own pay increase.

MARIE VOGT

Editor's Note: The law providing for an increase in the governor's salary was passed by the 1969 Legislature and would have been effective for any new governor. Mr. Exon had nothing to do with the change.

The Real Picture

Lincoln, Neb.

Recently I heard Mrs. Peggy Duff from England and a member of the International Confederation for Disarmament and Peace (ICDP) speak on the Vietnam tangle. Discussing the conflict, she talked on about the recent POW drive.

Mrs. Duff contrasted our demands that the North Vietnamese adhere to the Geneva Convention with our own practices concerning the prisoners we take. I begin to wonder why, during the last part of 1970 when everyone was writing Hanoi and gnashing teeth over the injusitces done to our some 300 MIA's or POW's, wasn't much presented in the news concerning the North Vietnamese prisoners taken by us (and sometimes tortured, according to Mrs. Duff) whom we hand over to the ARVN who definitely flout the Geneva regs. Or where was there mention of the prisons of South Vietnam which hold over 50,000 civilians and war prisoners in conditions which are not humane? How are Americans here to learn that South Vietnamese military prisons are subject only to announced visits by Red Cross personnel and the civilian prisons not even that?

The U.S. government and military won't give us the real picture, which is an urgent need. It won't always be comfortable but it will always be necessary.

Roads A Disgrace

Lincoln, Neb.

Our dear Mr. Carpenter with his LB671 wants to eliminate the provision that road builders be first qualified by our State Department of Roads. It's bad enough as it is. Two examples are the Interstate at Gretna and also near Milford. Those two stretches are rougher than a lot of county graveled roads and are a disgrace to our state.

The builder should have been required to rebuild them at his expense.

Muny Pool

Lincoln, Neb.

Any discussion by the Lincoln Park and Recreation Board of eliminating Muny Pool or cutting back on its program, as reported in The Star of February 12, is absurd. That is, unless the city would build a new facility to serve the area west of 27th Street.

Removing public recreational and other services is a sure way to cultivate community unrest. One would think that the experiences at Columbia University and disturbances in other cities, Lincoln included, would be an adequate lesson.

Troop Drug Use

Lincoln, Neb.

The national organization, "Another Mother for Peace in California," has released a new bumper-sticker with the message: "All Our Sons In Vietnam Are POW's. Bring Them Home!"

While along with all other loved ones of our men imprisoned in North Vietnam, we fervently hope for their safety and well-being, we cannot for one moment forget the danger and deprivation which the rest of our 337,900 sons in Vietnam face daily.

One of these daily dangers with ominous implications not only for the Army but for the American society as a whole is the rapidly increasing use of hard drugs by U.S. troops in Vietnam. A Defense Department official is quoted as saying:

"About two years ago only some 30 per cent of the troops were on drugs or pot. A year ago it was up to 40 per cent. Now it is 50 or 60 per cent." The most dramatiic increase is seen in the use of heroin, sold in abundant supplies on the South Vietnamese black market. The heroin sold to the American soldiers is 90 per cent pure. The Vietnamese heroin can readily kill its users.

The Vietnamese army in many instances supplies the U.S. soldier with heroin, and the Vietnamese government has refused to help in the problem.

We protest this waste.

There can be an "exchange of prisoners" only when a war ends!

Food Allergy Is Investigated As Multiple Sclerosis Cause

Omaha (UPI) — A scientist at the University of Nebraska medical center is investigating food allergy as a possible cause of multiple sclerosis, a chronic degenerative disease of the brain and spinal cord.

Dr. Wayne L. Ryan, research professor of obstetrics at the medical center, said in multiple sclerosis the myelin sheath around nerve cell fibers mysteriously disappears at scattered sites and is often replaced by scar tissue. As a result, such functions as sight, speech, and movement may be impaired or blocked completely.

This myelin sheath is damaged by a hypersensitivity to basic protein which is found in, among other things, myelin itself. Some researchers believe this is caused by an individual's system attacking its own myelin — a process known as autoimmunity.

This same myelin protein has produced experimental allergic encephalomyeletis in laboratory animals. Dr. Ryan explained experimental allergic encephalomyeletis (EAE) is often used as a model for research related to multiple sclerosis because both are similar diseases of the central nervous system.

EAE is produced by injecting laboratory animals with brain tissue or the basic protein of the brain. Dr. Ryan believes it may be possible to produce EAE in rabbits, guinea pigs and rats by ingestion of brain tissue or myelin protein.

$10 Food Sales Tax Credit Advanced

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature Tuesday gave initial approval to a bill which would raise the food sales tax credit from $7 to $10 per person at the current 2½% state sales tax rate.

The proposal, LB131, cleared its first floor test on a 25-17 vote after Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance provided the 25th vote necessary to move the bill toward second stage consideration.

But lawmakers also approved on a 26-14 vote Sen. Terry Carpenter's motion that LB131 be halted at final reading until the omnibus appropriations bill is put to a final vote, presumably in the dying days of the 1971 session.

Enatment of LB131 would deprive the state treasury of an estimated $4.3 million in annual revenue.

Opposed by Exon

The bill is opposed by Gov. J. James Exon who, instead, has proposed that the entire sales tax on grocery purchases be eliminated.

Sen. William Skarda of Omaha has presented the Legislature with a bill to approve Exon's recommendation, but that measure has not yet received a committee hearing.

LB131 is chiefly sponsored by Sen. Jules Burbach of Crofton, whom Exon defeated in the 1970 Democratic gubernatorial primary election.

Prior to the vote advancing his food sales tax credit measure, Burbach abandoned his proposal for a graduated food tax credit structure which would hike the credit for low-income citizens but wipe it out entirely for those with gross annual income exceeding $10,000.

Voted With Opposition

Burbach had gained Revenue Committee assent to adopt the amendment, but voted with the opposition in turning down the proposal on a 5-35 count.

After further consideration, he said, the proposal might be unfair.

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, a co-sponsor of LB131, said the graduated system would "negate the philosophy of the food tax credit" and be particularly unfair to middle income families.

The food tax credit now amounts to $7 per person.

LB131 would change the credit formula to provide a sales tax credit on $400 in food purchases. At the current 2½% tax rate, the credit would equal $10 per person.

Burbach said an increase is required because of inflationary food costs.

Sen. Ramey Whitney of Chappell warned that enactment of the bill could force an increase in sales and income tax rates. So did Sen. Rudolf Kokes of Ord, chairman of the revenue unit.

Carpenter said future legislative action is likely to boost the sales rate from 2½% to 3½% and the personal income tax rate from 10% to 14% or 15%.

"This is the beginning of it," he declared.

"Special Warning"

Senators whose terms end in 1973 should heed "a special warning" about citizen reaction to spending, Carpenter said. They're the ones who must face the voters next year, and "people are going to be hostile."

Four Lancaster County senators voted with the majority in advancing the bill. The other two members of the delegation were absent at the time.

Here's the vote:

For: Barnett, Burbach, Carpenter, Carsten, Carstens, Craft, Elrod, Goodrich, Hasebroock, Holmquist, Johnson, Kokes, Luedtke, Moylan, Proud, Savage, Simpson, Snyder, Stromer, Stull, Syas, Waldron, Warner, Wiltse, Ziebarth.

Against: Clark, DeCamp, Duis, Kennedy, Keyes, Klaver, Lewis, Mahoney, Maresh, Marvel, Morgan, Nore, Skarda, Stahmer, Waldo, Wallwey, Whitney.

Not Voting: Chambers, Epke, Kime, Kremer, Orme, Schmit, Swanson.

School Lands Investment Bill Is Advanced

By The Associated Press

After an hour of debate, the Legislature Tuesday gave first-round approval to a bill transferring from the Board of Educational Lands and Funds to the state investment officer the assignment of investing trust funds from the sale of state school lands.

The measure, Chappell Sen. Ramey Whitney's LB52, was advanced from general file on a 35-7 vote.

The vote was preceded by 18-24 rejection of Scottsbluff Sen. Terry Carpenter's amendment which would have reworded the bill to say that the investment responsibility "may" — instead of "shall" — be transferred to the investment officer by the Board of Educational Lands and Funds.

Done Better Job

Whitney contended that records show that the investment officer, presently Fred Kuethe, "has done a far better job" of earning money on investments than has the Board of Educational Lands and Funds. He predicted that within a few years, the change called for in LB52 would provide an additional one half million dollars a year for the benefit of schools.

The Educational Lands Board currently controls about $42 million in investments, the Legislature was told.

Carpenter objected to placing so much investing power in one man. He noted also that law permits the investment officer to invest up to 40% over an eight year period in common stocks.

The stock market, Carpenter cautioned, "has been going up and down like a fiddler's elbow."

The action on LB52 came on the 26th legislative day of the current unicameral session, a day devoted largely to consideration of bills on general file, where measures receive first and major floor debate after having won committee approval.

Revival Attempted

Sen. Glenn A. Goodrich moved to revive a committee-killed bill, LB279, to add a chiropractor to membership on the State Board of Health. Action on the motion was deferred.

A bill of Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, LB51, calling for drug education in the public schools, was pulled back from its final reading stage for amendments rewriting the bill.

In its new form, the bill calls for schools to offer a comprehensive health education program which would include information on the results of drug use and abuse. Special emphasis would be placed on tobacco, alcohol, marijuana hallucinogenics, amphetamines, barbiturates and narcotics. The State Commission of Education would prepare teaching aids and materials, and schools failing to provide the health education could lose their approved of accredited rating.

Repeal Of Lien Requirement Advanced

By The Associated Press

Given a second chance, the Legislature Tuesday gave preliminary approval to a bill which would repeal a provision of state law requiring that liens be placed on the property of aged persons who receive welfare.

The senators voted 30-7 to advance LB130, the repealing bill, from general file, the first stage of floor consideration.

Last Friday, a motion to advance the same bill had not received the required 25 votes. It was approved by only 23 senators.

The bill is sponsored by Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice and Harold Simpson of Lincoln. It would remove the lien requirement now in effect.

At the request of the senator who sponsored the bill, the legislators also voted to kill LB140 which would have provided that deaf persons and others with impairments be provided interpreters when they are involved in legal matters, including criminal actions.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Fern Hubbard Orme of Lincoln, asked that the measure be killed after she read a letter from the State Justice Department advising her that existing state law "fully takes care of" persons who have difficulty understanding legal matters.

The Legislature also received a resolution calling for an interim study dealing with banks and their role in the processing of state funds. The resolution was laid over for one day.

Meyer's Opinion Asked On Status Of Death Penalty

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp Tuesday released a letter he has sent to Atty Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer requesting Meyer's opinion on the status of capital punishment in the state.

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee recently killed a bill to abolish the death penalty in Nebraska.

DeCamp explained "there are a number of ways to do away with the death penalty and they include having it declared unconstitutional by the attorney general."

He said "a number of other states" have taken similar action.

The last person executed in Nebraska was Charles Starkweather in 1959.

Permission To Withdraw Birth Control Bill Asked

By The Associated Press

The sponsor of the only birth control-related bill in the current legislative session Tuesday asked permission to have his bill withdrawn.

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp said he had been advised some persons were trying to use his LB261 as a liberalized abortion bill, an effect DeCamp says he wasn't trying to achieve when he sponsored the bill.

DeCamp's bill would make legal the purchase of birth control devices by women.

No action was taken Tuesday on DeCamp's motion and the request was laid over until Wednesday.

Although there had been indications before the session began that a bill might be introduced to liberalize the state's abortion laws, no such measure was introduced and DeCamp said he didn't intend to allow his bill to become the focal point for a dispute over the state's abortion statute.

DeCamp said he and other legislators have received numerous letters from citizens regarding LB261. DeCamp said many of the writers are under the mistaken impression his bill would liberalize abortion.

Road Programs Approved By County Commissioners

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster County Commissioners adopted Tuesday the 1971 fiscal year and six-year road programs as proposed with additions made last week by County Engineer Walter Hoppe.

The adopted programs call for $1,481,000 in expenditures for the 1971-72 fiscal year and $8,559,000 for the six-year program including 1971-72.

Hoppe's proposed one-year program with additions calls for 15.3 miles of new paving and four miles of resurfacing while the total six-year program calls for more than 73 miles of new paving and six miles of resurfacing.

Proposed changes by Hoppe and approved by the board for the 1971-72 fiscal year include dropping two miles of grading proposed from Holland and instead paving three-fourths of a mile east of Firth at a cost of $60,000; paving an additional strip of one-half mile on Folsom adjacent to West South at an estimated cost of $85,000, and changing proposed grading from west of Denton to south of Denton at an estimated cost of $95,000.

Other road projects and estimated costs slated for paving this year, some of which are already under construction under the 1970 calendar year program, are:

1.5 miles west on South Street, $215,000
2.7 miles from Rokeby north, $190,000
3 miles on the Waverly Road, $90,000
2.1 miles from Walton west, $180,000

LaSertoma Club Honors Students

Bren Buckley and Steve McBride, Lincoln High School seniors, were honored Tuesday evening by the Gateway LaSertoma Club.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winton W. Buckley, Bren attends Southeast High School, and Steve, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McBride, is a student at Lincoln Northeast High School.

They were presented citations and saving bonds for their "outstanding leadership and service to the community."

Art May Quits LAP To Become Official Of Inter-Tribal Indian Unit

Art May, director of the Lincoln Action Porgram since its inception in 1966, announced his resignation Tuesday to accept a position as executive director of the Nebraska Indian Inter-Tribal Development Corp.

May said that the inter-tribal development group has received a grant of $35,000 from the Economic Development Administration to develop industry and the economy of the Winnebago, Omaha and Santee Sioux Indian tribes, all located in northern Nebraska.

May will assume the position March 15, with an office in Winnebago. He said that he and his family will live in Macy.

His salary as executive director will be $13,000, about $2,000 less than his position as director of LAP

He said that a possible replacement would be considered at a meeting of the personnel comittee members of LAP on Friday.

He said that his leaving LAP comes at a good time for him personally and "the job is a challenge to start all over again in community development for the poor."

"I think that LAPh has been improving constantly," he said, "and they are in a good position with a competent staff and board of directors."

Youth Receives Minor Injuries When Hit By Car

A Lincoln youth was treated for minor injuries at St. Elizabeth Health Center Tuesday and was later released, following a car-pedestrian accident at 27th and Vine earlier in the afternoon.

Police identified the youth as Bryan P. Spale, 12, of 853 No. 30th, and said that he was struck by an auto driven by Mrs. Hilda Johnson, 73, of 856 So. 36th, as he attempted to cross the street.

Police said that Spale appeared to have received only minor cuts and bruises.

County Defers Action On Irons' Appeal

Lancaster County Commissioners Tuesday deferred action on an appeal by Bud Irons Excavating Co. of denial by the assessor's office to license motor vehicles of the firm outside the city of Lincoln taxing district.

Carl S. Irons, president of the firm, told the board that his vehicles have always been licensed outside Lincoln and that this was the first time the assessor contended that they should be licensed within the city, where Assessor Fritz Meyer contends is Irons' principle place of business.

Irons said he had offices in Lincoln and Cheney and Seward but his trucks and equipment are kept at Cheney and also maintained there were none being kept in Lincoln.

He said his office in Lincoln is where the phone is listed in the directory and that bookkeeping is done.

Upon questioning by the board, Irons said no records except maintenance records are kept at Cheney but that all billings are prepared and mailed from the Lincoln office.

He said only 30% of his total business is conducted in Lincoln and that the building where his Lincoln office is located is up for sale and that he intends to move his offices when that is sold.

Ken Cobb, representing Irons, told the board that if it would make a difference Irons could have his entire office now located in Lincoln moved out to Cheney by the Feb. 28 deadline for obtaining license tabs.

The commissioners indicated they would like to study a case quoted by Cobb and investigate the situation a little further before making a decision.

In other action, the board approved vacating and abandoning Barkley Blvd. in the Pine Lake Addition.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

"Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward," said grandma. She had a headful of wise sayings.

Not looking for trouble. In fact, happy days (more or less). An eye on the bluebird and watch the calories.

The Bureau of Mines keeps me updated on the salt supply: "A survey along the Gulf Coast shows underground formations contain enough salt to last the world for thousands of years."

The children like salt on the morning eggs. I passed them the shaker: "Live it up."

"The papers never print the good news," a lady said the other night at dinner. "It's always trouble, trouble, trouble."

She said: "I never bother to read the front page anymore." (But of course she does.)

It's a common enough complaint. It you work around journalism, somebody's always ripping you off for what the papers print.

Joe and Mary have the mortgage half paid off. Buy a new car. Good news. But we can't sell papers. But --.

Joe says something about the biscuits. Mary reaches for the loaded lady-from-Bristol. Bang! Right between the antlers. Papers sell like crazy.

The lady said: "I don't see why newspapers have to sell papers."

I siad: "I guess you're right."

("Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you," said grandma.)

Saturday morning is cartoon day. The moppets are enchanted with a thing about talking chimpanzees. The TV goes yakitty yak. Voices dubbed in.

The chimp's brain weighs 375 grams. About a fourth of a human brain.

Yet the chimp can be taught to wear clothes and appear comically on TV, riding a bike.

He makes a whacking lot more money than the voice that is dubbed in.

(Throw away your big brain. man. Get yourself a lot of teeth and a comical face. Learn to ride a bike.)

☆ ☆ ☆

Quiet days around the family scatter. We're waiting for the new thing on plastic credit cards: Your picture will be on them. This is supposed to foil the Bad Guys who steal credit cards. Roll up a bundle of charges and sell the loot.

"The average American carries eight credit cards. He has access to seven more he keeps at home or in the office."

It's a trusting world, mate.

☆ ☆ ☆

"Credit cards are a sex symbol." So said some motivation bloke. He gets a high score for smart remarks. There are firms who look into your inner motives — why do you drive the car with tail fins?

Most things they find are sex symbols. They report this — with charts — at the long mahogany table where the board of directs sits solemnly.

Sex symbols are very popular in advertising. When the gasoline company mails you the plastic credit card, they are tickling the hidden lecher.

☆ ☆ ☆

The razor blade people, the deodorant kings, the auto tycoons are reaching into secret recesses of seduction.

The motivation people are the advance men. The procurers.

A sordid business — I wish I had a motivation man of my own.

There's no sex symbolism in a typewriter. Just work and pray.

A bank note valentine inscribed to Miss Anne Caroline Keen was given about 1850. Sentimental "money" of this type was popular but declared illegal by the government.
(Barnes and Waycotts, auctioneers, Torquay, England)

BY RALPH AND TERRY KOVEL

Love and money must have gone hand in hand in Victorian times. An unusual Valentine issued about 1850 was the Bank of True Love note. This style was lithographed by several firms. It said, "I promise to pay to (and the girl's name was inscribed) on acceptance the sincere homage and never failing devotion of an affectionate heart." Rather stilted words but a sentiment still to be found in today's valentines.

The bank note valentines were also issued in England after 1847. They were so like real money they were not only banned, but recalled by the government. The American notes were discontinued for similar reasons after a very short time.

Collectors should visit the refurnished rooms of the Department of State Building in Washington, D.C. Foreign dignitaries often see the Department of State rooms first. Several years ago, it was decided to show the finest of the America's past. Outstanding American furniture, paintings, silver, and decorative items are used in the rooms. This entire task is being completed without any money from the government. Fine furnishings can be given or lent to the State Department.

Money, of course, is always welcome. If you would like to donate to this worthwhile restoration, send your check to Mr. Clement Conger, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 10520. Every contribution is acknowledged by the State Department. This might be a nice gift to honor a friend who is interested in antiques or American history. Any gift of money or antiques is tax deductible.

Q My vase is stamped Dickens ware-Weller. It is glazed in brown, tan, with shades of green and a stalk of corn raised on the side.

A. Dickens ware was made by the Weller Pottery Company of Steubenville, Ohio. There were three different "lines" called Dickens ware by the Weller Company. The first line was made with raised slip decorations made by scratching the design into the clay. They were made with either a matt or high gloss finish.

These Weller pieces often pictured Indians, birds, animals, or monks. Both lines of the Dickens ware were often marked just Weller. It pictured characters from the stories of Charles Dickens. All three types date from about 1900 to 1905.

Q. What is a "slipper chair?"

A. The slipper chair is a small sided or armchair that was made for the bedroom. It was usually upholstered. It was traditionally named because the lady of the house sat on it to put on her slippers (shoes). It had short legs so the seat was closer to the ground.

Q. Is Dresden China the same as Meissen China?

A. No. Meissen China was made at the famous Meissen factory in Germany since about 1710. Dresden is a German City that was located near the Meissen factory. Any procelain coming from that area is called Dresden.

BOOK REVIEW

"American Art Pottery" by Lucile Henzke (Nelson) is the first general book about the American pottery of the 1880-1920 period. Many of the important factories, Rookwood, Weller, Fulper, Roseville, Newcomb, Cowan, Gates, Grueby, and others are included. Short history, marks, and pictures, including 16 pages of color, make this a good book for collectors.

If you enjoy doing research on antiques, you will want Ralph and Terry Kovell's book list "Best Books About Antiques." Send 5 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to KNOW YOUR ANTIQUES in care of The Lincoln Star.

Ralph and Terry Kovel regret that they cannot research and provide personal answers about antiques you may own. They do appreciate your questions which can be answered in the column. Pictures and drawings cannot be returned.

Good Questions And Answers

Q. I am 14 years old and I really have a problem. A summer ago I went swimming every day with my steady boy friend. I have been going with him for two years. Well, this past summer I would not go because I am bow-legged. He got mad at me because I would not go swimming. I tell you it is awful. I wonder if you can help me? I have several pretty bathing suits and lots of shorts but unless you can help me I might as well give them away.

A. I think you are bow-legged in your thinking. In other words, you have just become conscious of your bow-legs. They could not change so much in a few months time or be that bad. Evidently your boy friend did not think they were unattractive so go on and swim and wear shorts and forget it next summer.

Q. I am 17 years old, 5 feet 4 inches tall and weigh 118 pounds. Many of my friends say that I am too thin while others say I am just right. I would like your opinion.

A. You are just right.

Q. I have lost inches from my overlarge hips and abdomen, will I have to keep up the exercisesses in order to keep my measurements the same?

A. Bulging measurements come from overweight, lax muscles and fat which accumulates more readily over inactive muscles. Therefore, you would be wise to continue your exercises. They are good for you anyway.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

The great majority of hands are played in suit contracts rather than in notrump. In all such hands declarer faces the problem of whether or not to draw trumps.

Solving this question is crucial in many hands, but, unfortunately, it is impossible to formulate any single rule that will guide declarer unerringly to a clear-cut answer.

In general, declarer draws the adverse trumps as soon as possible if his values consist primarily of high cards and there is a danger of having them ruffed unless trumps are drawn.

But when declarer can gain tricks by utilizing either his own or dummy's trumps for ruffing purposes, he delays the extraction of trumps until such time as it becomes advantageous to draw them.

The most common case where declarer does not extract trumps occurs when dummy has a void, a singleton or a doubleton of a side suit in which declarer has losers that can be ruffed in dummy.

Today's hand illustrates this method of play. West leads a club won by South with the ace.

If declarer were now to draw the opponents' trumps, he would wind up going down one. He could still ruff one of his three club losers in dummy, but eventually he would lose a second club trick.

Played properly, however, declarer makes the contract with the greatest of ease. After taking the ace of clubs at trick one, he returns a club at trick two. The defense now cannot stop him from ruffing two clubs in dummy with high trumps. After he has done this, South draws East's remaining trumps and thus makes the slam. The defenders score a club trick, but no more.

ABBY

tell your dad your suspicions—it may help

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What does a teen-aged son do when he knows his father is having a back-street affair with his secretary?

I've planned to say so many things, but always end up in a cold sweat and say nothing.

My mom is a fine looking woman. She is pretty, dresses well and can hold her own on any subject, so why did dad turn to a cheap nobody? He sneaks around like a common thief to meet this woman at a motel on Wednesday afternoons (his day off).

Dad used to be such a great guy. Now I can hardly look at him without feeling sick to my stomach. I just have to do something, Abby, but it scares me. I can't go to our rabbi with this rotten mess because he is a friend of the family. My father is a professional man and everybody in town thinks well of him. Please help me. I don't want mom hurt.

BROKEN-HEARTED SON

DEAR SON: Tell your father what you suspect, but don't be surprised if he denies it. And don't be disenchanted either. He may have "problems" you know nothing about. Be patient. At least your father will be alerted to the hazards in his conduct — for your mom's sake if not his.

DEAR ABBY: My inlaws are the world's greatest. Often they take a widow friend along when they go out to dine. This little lady is on a rather tight budget, and after eating, she unobtrusively slips the remainder of her meat into a little plastic bag which she carries in her purse for that purpose.

I can tell this embarrasses my inlaws, altho they have never said anything about it.

With the price of meat nowadays, it's a shame to waste it, but don't you think someone should tell the little lady to ask the waiter for a doggie bag?

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DAUGHTER: You're doggone right. Somebody should ask the waiter for a doggie bag, and it doesn't matter who asks. Most fine restaurants not only provide them, they offer them.

DEAR ABBY: Let me tell you about the divorce in our family. When our son divorced his wife, we continued to love our daughter in law and their four children as we always had.

Our former daughter in law maintains close and loving relations with us because she loves us, too. How can love suddenly stop because there is a divorce?

Now she is remarried and so is our son, and we love the "new" spouses, and they love us.

It takes a lot of patience and understanding when divorce comes, but love remains for those concerned, if there was love there to begin with. Why can't others see it this way? THE THOMASES

DEAR THOMASES: Because when divorce comes, there is usually a lot of ugly talk on both sides.

suburbia

Country Club Manor
Eastborough
Wellington Greens

The saying goes that you're only as old as you feel you are. This is true for all ages. Those who keep active and involved, and interested in life around them, can stay young at heart forever.

Suburbia has many residents who will easily qualify under the category of young at heart and in spirit. Among the many members of the Seniors Bowling League, who must be 55 or older to be a member, are Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Paulson of Country Club Manor. Mr. and Mrs. Paulson have been playing down alleys, bowling alleys that is, for the past 12 years. Since their retirement, they have become even more active in bowling leagues, and just last week they played every day but Tuesday. They are often called on to substitute, and are members of the Teachers' League, the School Masters' League, as well as the Seniors' League.

On Monday, Mrs. Paulson hit her high score for this year, a grand 207. However, that doesn't top her record high of 243. Both Mr. and Mrs. Paulson hold averages of somewhere near 150. In addition to enjoyment of the sport itself, the Paulsons find that bowling is a wonderful way to meet some wonderful people.

Among the young we found two children of Mr. and Mrs. William Whitford of Eastborough who both celebrated their birthdays earlier this month. Don Whitford saw the beginning of his eleventh year on Feb. 1, and his sister Delilah turned seven on Feb. 4. Boys don't seem to go in for all of the fancies that young misses do and so, Don's celebration was a quiet one with the family. However, Delilah had a ball at her party. She invited eight of her school friends to take part in the festivities.

One of our Suburban neighbors will be leaving her Lincoln home permanently in April for far away places. Mrs. William Mook of Eastborough, wife of Lt. Col. William Mook who has been serving in the U.S. Army in Vietnam for the past year, is counting the days until March 12, and her husband's return from his tour of duty. The Mooks will have much to talk about, and much catching up to do. Among the exciting plans for Lt. Col. Mook's return, will be a belated Christmas celebration.

Col. and Mrs. Mook will be busy people during the month of March and the first part of April. They will be preparing for their next assignment — Stuttgart, Germany, where they will be living for the next three years.

When Mrs. James Johnston found that her husband was snowed under with work for the weekend, she decided to do her part to help out. On Friday, Mrs. Johnston and her two sons, Jimmie and Robbie, left Dad at their Country Club Plaza home so that he could concentrate on his work, and took off for Lexington to visit Mrs. Johnston's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson. During the course of the visit which ended on Monday, Mrs. Johnston visited with a childhood friend from high school, Mrs. Howard Philpot.

Texas seems to have an attraction in Wellington Green circles. Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Koser returned Sunday from five full days in Brownsville, Tex. They stayed at the beautiful Valley International Country Club and spent most of their time catching up on their golf game. Brownsville is close to the Mexican border, and the Kosers took advantage of the short distance to travel in that country as well.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thorsen also was a visitor in Texas this month. The wedding of their granddaughter, Miss Paula Thorsen, daughter of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Thorsen of Houston, Tex., was the occasion for the trip south. They spent five days busily involved in wedding activities, and returned to their Wellington Greens home on Tuesday, Feb. 9.

MISS MARY KOTTAS

This morning announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Milo Kottas of Milligan of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Mary Jo, to Donald Bougger son of Mr and Mrs. August Bougger of Rising City.

Saturday, May 29, has been chosen as a wedding date.

Miss Kottas was graduated from Peru State College where she majored in business administration, last summer and she now is a member of the Fairbury public schools faculty.

Mr. Bougger also is a graduate of the University of Nebraska and now is teaching social studies at Pound Junior High School in Lincoln.

Picasso, Matisse? Take Your Pick

Could the talent of a young Picasso, the genius of a Matisse — or the success of a Grandma Moses, be hidden among these paintings? Of course it is hard to tell, but it is a well known fact that even Rembrandt made his debut at an early age.

A combination of fun and talent; the Annual Children's Art Exhibit, was held recently at the District O.R. I School in Bennet. An overwhelming exhibit of 600 paintings, by young children was displayed for proud parents. Under the direction of the art teacher, Alex Fisher, and the coordination of Mrs. Gerald Hedges, the annual exhibit was assessed to be a huge success.

Pictured above with their array of talent, from left to right, are some of the winners; Jonathan Brinkman-grade two, Kenneth Smith-grade six, Brooks Church-grade five, Bryan Desh-grade four, and Carol Holdsworth-grade four. Other winners included, Peggy Hall, Linda Delp, Melanie Malone, Debbie Biggs, Larry Wallen, Lynn Beecham, Rhondeen Hansel, and Toni Nisely. Winners in the junior division were Kevin Jones, Donna Hornung, Gimmy Fettrini, and Diana Hornung.

Stage And Screen

BY A. H. WEILER
(c) New York Times Service

New York — That bookish Bronte brood is back in a big way. On Thursday, AIP's spanking-new version of Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights" bows at the Music Hall, with Timothy Dalton and Anna Calder-Marshal doing the Heathcliff-Cathy bit done so beautifully by Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon in William Wyler's 1939 film, and later this year we'll be seeing another cinematic edition of Charlotte Bronte's "Jane Eyre," starring George C. Scott and Susannah York as Rochester and Jane, the roles played by Orson Welles and Joan Fontaine in Robert Stevenson's 1944 movie.

So it's small wonder that author Christopher Fry and director Richard Fleischer have decided to get together on a movie that gives us the lowdown on Emily, Charlotte and their whole fascinating family. It will be called "The Brontes" and it should be ready for shooting by May. The film will star Mia Farrow and Glenda Jackson as Emily and Charlotte, the parts played by — are you ready for this? — Ida Lupino and Olivia De Havilland in Curtis Bernhardt's "Devotion," a 1946 movie biography of the Brontes. John Hart will play the brooding Branwell Bronte, acted by Arthur Kennedy back in '46. Fleischer and Fry hope to get Hayley Mills to do for Anne Bronte what Nancy Coleman did for her in the earlier film, and for papa Bronte, played by Montagu Love.

PRODUCER EDGAR LANSBURY, a happy man because of the praise heaped on his off Broadway revival of "Waiting for Godot," now wants to be happy in the movies, too. That's the reason he has acquired the rights to "Escape Artist," David Wagoner's 1965 novel about a homeless teenager who tries to become another Houdini. Lansbury intends to produce the movie with his brother Bruce.

"SHINBONE ALLEY," the unique turf trod by Don Marquis's archy the Cockroach and Mehitabel the Cat, will soon be on the screen — as the offbeat setting of an animated cartoon. Allied Artists will distribute the feature, which was directed by John Wilson and produced by Preston M. Fleet. The voice of Mehitabel will actually be that of Carol Channing, and Eddie Bracken will be heard as Archy, a role he once played in a short-lived Broadway musical with Eartha Kitt.

"This is one cartoon that is not being aimed at kids," said a spokesman for Allied Artists. Could it be that we are about to see our first x-rated cockroach?

Dessert Planned

The Lincoln Alumnae Chapter of Delta Zeta Sorority will honor the seniors of Zeta Chapter at the University of Nebraska and Beta Tau Chapter at Nebraska Wesleyan University at a dessert supper on Thursday evening, Feb. 18, at the Ramada Inn.

Mrs. Wayne Boles is chairman for the 7:30 o'clock event, and the committee includes Mrs. Russell Brauer and Miss Nettie Clark.

Playhouse Meeting

The Lincoln Community Playhouse Guild will meet Thursday afternoon, Feb. 18, for a 1 o'clock dessert luncheon at the home of Mrs. Robert Larson, 3009 Sheridan Blvd.

Mrs. John Braeman of the Speaker's Bureau of the League of Women Voters will present the program. Her topic will be "Lincoln — Civic Problems and Future Needs."

Doyle Receives Committee OK

By The Associated Press

Without a dissenting vote, members of the Legislature's Committee on Committees Tuesday recommended confirmation of Gov. J. J. Exon's appointment of Thomas Doyle as director-state engineer of the Department of Roads.

The same 10-0 approving votes were given to motions to recommend confirmation of Exon's appointments of Glenn Kreuscher to be state agriculture director, John Kissack to be motor vehicles director, and Henry Ley to be director of banking. Three member of the 13-member committee were absent when votes were taken.

Doyle, state labor commissioner during the Gov. Norbert T. Tiemann administration, was quizzed by committee members on a number of points. In response to questions, he said:

—He does not plan to influence wage patterns in the private construction area — patterns which could affect the cost of highway building.

—He plans to continue the two-year and six-year highway program as outlined by the previous administration, but said the program anticipates $15 million a year in revenue for which no provision appears to be made. "The program visualizes more revenue than we can put our hands on at this time," he said.

—He is required to follow the state law which permits government employes to organize and bargain collectively, but has no particular interest for or against.

—He would like to keep the highway commission as an advisory body but would strengthen its functions. Highway commission members "serve a very legitimate purpose," he said. "They are out in the field, meeting the people."

—He agrees philosophically with Exon's pay-as-you-go policy on road building.

Credit Card Plan Killed In Committee

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee Tuesday killed a bill which would clear citizens of any liability for unauthorized use of credit cards not accepted by them.

Sen. Ellen Craft of North Platte, sponsor of the proposal, asked the committee to junk her LB418 because, she said, credit card liability is already clearly established in federal truth-in-lending laws.

There was no opposition to her request.

In other action, the committee advanced without dissent LB436, which would reduce to six months the maximum period during which any indicted person can be imprisoned prior to trial.

The time period could be extended upon the application of the prisoner.

The committee amended the bill to also provide a six-months maximum for indicted persons out on bail.

Current statutes provide a limit of two judicial terms for prisoners and three judicial terms for indicted persons on bail.

Sen. David Stahmer of Omaha, sponsor of LB436, said his proposal is designed to meet federal constitutional guarantees of a speedy trial.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha supported the bill, noting that "many people wait in Douglas County more than six months for trial."

Even six months is "a long time" for a person later found to be not guilty, Chambers said. Perhaps, he said, the state should compensate innocent citizens for their time spent in jail.

Ed Carter Jr. of Lincoln, speaking for the Nebraska Bar Association, noted that persons released after six months could still be indicted for the same offense at a later date if the prosecution so wishes.

Also sent to the floor was LB421, providing that members of the State Board of Education be liable for impeachment under the same conditions as state executive officials.

LB412, providing for District Court designation of official pretrial release agencies, also cleared the committee without opposition.

Held for amendment was LB427, which would require county attorneys to prosecute in insufficient fund check cases after 10 days notice to delinquent checkwriters.

Mandatory Insurance Bill Killed

For the fourth time in the past decade, a bill proposing mandatory liability insurance on motor vehicles registered in Nebraska has died in a committee of the Legislature.

A 7-0 vote of the Unicameral's Banking Committee Tuesday buried Neligh Sen. John De Camp's LB411, which would have required proof of financial responsibility before a motor vehicle could be registered in the state.

The same fate befell similar bills in 1963, 1965 and 1969.

Insurance interests who opposed the bill at its public hearing said mandatory insurance has proved a failure in New York, Massachusetts and North Carolina, the only states with such laws on the books. They said Nebraska's current financial responsibility law has proved one of the best in the nation, and that 92% of Nebraska drivers are insured.

De Camp got his only support from James Preston, managing director of the Motor Carriers Association, who said he favors the bill's concept. Truckers are required to be insured, he noted, and the problem of encounters with uninsured vehicles, although not severe, is growing.

Action was deferred on Fremont Sen. E. Thome Johnson's LB375, authorizing savings and loan associations to engage in what backers described as "very limited" trust activity, The bill was opposed at the public hearing chiefly by bankers.

Firing Procedures Bill Advanced By Committee

The Legislature's Education Committee voted Tuesday to send to the floor a bill providing procedures for the dismissal of faculty members or students who engage in "disruptive activities" at a state college or university.

First, however, the committee adopted a series of amendments advocated by the University of Nebraska Board of Regents through its attorney, Flavel Wright of Lincoln.

Applied to Oakland Sen. Claire W. Holmquist's LB445, the amendments include provisions that a body other than the regents could hold hearings. The bill as amended also would exempt from the bill's protective provisions faculty members on "probationary appointment."

The committee rejected Wright's suggestion that a section in LB445, requiring a public hearing for the person charged, be deleted from the bill.

But the amended bill would allow investigative hearings to be held in "executive sessions" at which the public may be barred if the investigative committee considered the discussion to be personal.

The committee also approved an amended version of LB446, a measure to outlaw corporal punishment in schools. The committee amended the bill to provide that such punishment could be used to protect life or property.

LB445 won unanimous approval. LB446 was advanced on a 7-1 margin, with Sen. George Syas of Omaha casting the dissenting vote.

Patients Decline

Frankfort, Ky. (AP) — Patients in Kentucky's four state mental hospitals number 50% fewer than five years ago.

Bill Limiting Senators To Over 21 Advanced

Nebraska's Legislature gave first-round approval Tuesday to a proposed constitutional amendment to set a minimum age requirement of 21 for membership in the Unicameral.

The proposal, LB126, which would be put before the voters next year, was sent over its first floor hurdle on a 38-1 margin with Callaway Sen. J. James Waldron casting the lone negative vote.

Initial approval was preceded by a humorous exchange among the legislators on a proposed amendment to the bill by Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff.

Carpenter offered an amendment which would have set a minimum age of 30 and a maximum age of 70 for membership in the Unicameral.

The 70-year-old Scottsbluff lawmaker said he offered the amendment to provide "one way for the people to get rid of the senator from the 48th District." The 48th is Carpenter's district.

However, Carpenter later withdrew the amendment after several of his colleagues rose to say that although they often disagreed with the Scottsbluff senator they did not wish to see him forced out of office because of his age.

"I didn't think you cared," the colorful and controversial Carpenter grinned as he withdrew his amendment.

Seeing Eye Dog Action Deferred

It would be a misdemeanor offense for the owner or employe of a place of public accommodation to refuse admittance to a blind person with a seeing eye dog under a bill considered Tuesday by the Legislature's Public Health Committee.

The committee deferred action on the measure, LB472, introduced by Sen. Thomas C. Kennedy of Newman Grove, to await hearing later on a similar bill.

Kennedy said the legislation, taken from a statute in Michigan, was prompted by a conversation with a blind girl who said she had been refused admittance to some public places because she was accompanied by her seeing eye dog.

The bill says a person may be fined up to $100 for refusing admittance to a blind person and dog as long as the dog is harnessed and the person shows evidence that the dog has been trained at an accredited school for guide dogs.

In other action, the committee sent to the floor bills to extend the time in which corpses may be claimed for burial or cremation before they are delivered for medical use, and to permit records of residents of state institutions to be released to agencies serving the person after discharge from the institution.

The committee postponed action on a bill to allow cities authority to grant licenses for garbage disposal facilities after it was decided amendments to the bill need to be coordinated.

Child Found

Croydon, England (AP) — More than 50 police spent five hours searching Croydon when four-year-old Lisabeth Bastrod from Norway disappeared. She was found enjoying a soak in a bathtub in another guest's room in the hotel where she was staying.

Proposals Said Sufficient For Mental Health Clinics

Medical services, specifically mental health, were in the spotlight Tuesday as the Unicameral's Budget Committee completed the second of a three-day public hearing on the budget request of the State Department of Public Institutions.

Dr. R. G. Osborne, deputy institutions director for medical services, told the committee the budget recommendations made by Gov. J. J. Exon "won't impair our ability to maintain the level of services in our satellite clinics."

The satellite clinics of which Dr. Osborne was speaking are the regional mental health centers at Hastings, Norfolk, Lincoln and Scottsbluff.

Exon's recommendations for the upcoming fiscal year are lower than the requests at all four levels. He gave $5.7 million to Hastings which requested just over $7 million; $4.4 million to Norfolk as against a request of $5.9 million; $5.8 million to Lincoln compared to a $7.8 million request; and $108,000 to the Scottsbluff institution as against a $111,000 request.

Bennett Supports Council Districts

City Council candidate Bill Bennett said Tuesay he feels Sen. Wally Barnett's bill before the Legislature calling for election of council members by district would be a "more effective means of obtaining an evenly distributed and representative type of City Council."

The bill, LB122, is now in committee.

Image Untarnished

Frankfort, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky Education Association has released a poll it financed which shows teachers still have a good public image despite controversial statewide walkout for higher pay and benefits earlier this year.

Country Club President Is Lou Roper

Lou Roper was elected president of the Lincoln Country Club at a meeting of the board of directors Tuesday.

Dr. Paul Peterson was elected vice president and Don Bergquist Jr., secretary. Dale Tinstman was elected treasurer.

The Lincoln Community Playhouse and the Lincoln Technical College adult education program are offering a series of theatrical classes to the general public during the spring term.

Feed Would Be Exempted By OKd Bill

Products purchased by farmers for livestock feed purposes — such as grains, minerals, salts, proteins, fats, vitamins and antibiotics — would be exempt from sales taxes under a bill approved and sent to the floor on a 7-1 vote Tuesday of the Legislature's Revenue Committee.

The measure, LB491, was sponsored chiefly by Sen. Willard H. Waldo of De Witt, who noted that manufacturers of prepared feed enjoy such exemption on component products, but farmers who mix their own feeds do not.

The committee killed 7-1 Callaway Sen. J. James Waldron's LB516, which would have more than doubled the registration fee for local and commercial trucks.

Advanced 7-1 was Waldo's LB527, providing for certain tax forms to show the school district in which the taxpayer resides.

Food Ordinance Proposal Poked

. . . BY CHURCH GROUPS

By DAVE HASSENSTAB
Star Staff Writer

Opposition to a proposed food ordinance was voiced at a Tuesday meeting of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Board.

The auditorium at the Health Board was filled to overflow capacity, mostly by members of Lincoln churches who protested an item in the ordinance which would place church groups selling food for public consumption under the regulation of the health board.

The ordinance as written would require a church group to have proper equipment and meet sanitary regulations as well as licensed employes before it could sponsor a public event.

Same Requirement

The requirement would put the church groups under the same requirement as a Group 1 food establishment or restaurant.

City Attorney Dick Wood said that the ordinance would cover Lincoln and a three-mile area outside of city limits and that one permit would allow three separate groups within a church to sponsor a public food-serving event after passing inspection.

Bob Jeamby, executive secretary of the Lincoln Council of Churches proposed that the ordinance be changed to include churches presenting more than three such events in any one year and not those sponsoring less.

'Distinction'

"There is a distinction between regular food-serving churches and the others," he said. "There are only a handful of churches falling under the Class I requirement."

He also proposed that the ordinance be changed to protect the Tabitha Home, "meals on wheels" program which might be endangered by the ordinance.

Meeting the requirements of the ordinance would cost the churches nothing for the permit, Dr. George Underwood, Health Department director said, and would protect the churches or scouting organizations, which would also be affected by the ordinance, from being sued, which could happen in the case of any food poisoning.

Protect Public

Les Sanger, head of the environmental health division of city-county health department told the group that the ordinance "is designed to protect the public and they have nothing to fear."

Sanger did say, however, that provisions have been made for a temporary permit which groups could obtain with requirements not as strict as the Class I requirements.

Opponents of the ordinance said that the members of the groups have the responsibility to police themselves and that the relatively small number of cases of food poisoning does not merit the wording of the ordinance.

Some Supporters

The League of Women Voters and two members of the Lincoln Dietician Association testified at the hearing in favor of the ordinance.

Another hearing will be held before the ordinance is presented to the City Council for hearings there.

MRS. J. W. RAPP

Mrs. Rapp To Run For City Council

Mrs. J. W. Rapp, 500 Hazelwood Dr., the wife of a Lincoln podiatrist, filed Tuesday for the Lincoln City Council, bringing the number of candidates to three.

Mrs. Rapp, the mother of five children, said she is running "to become involved in city government."

Moving to Lincoln four and a half years ago, she said she feels city government has a profound effect upon the lives of its residents and wants to help find solutions for the various issues confronting the city.

"People should not just complain if they are not willing to use their energies and time to find solutions," she said.

A resident of Lincoln for 4½ years, she is active in the Lincoln Community Playhouse Guild and is a member of Christ Methodist Church.

Mrs. Rapp said she feels strongly regarding zoning that the council should generally abide by the recommendations of the Planning Commission.

"We have a Planning Commission for a purpose," she said.

Council Okays Enforcement Of State Milk Law

The City Council Monday adopted a resolution approving an agreement between the city and the State Agriculture Department regarding enforcement of the state milk law.

Under the agreement, the City-County Health Department would enforce the law for the state and would receive fees in return.

City Atty. Dick Wood said he understood the agreement would not result in an expansion of the staff.

Wood said the city's previous graded milk law had been ruled invalid by the courts.

He said afterwards the ordinance, which the council recently repealed, was thrown out on the grounds that it was arbitrary, unreasonable and had no relation to the protection of public health, safety and welfare.

The council also took the following actions:

Acute-Care Hospitals To Be Funded

Washington (AP) —The Health, Education and Welfare Department said Tuesday it has reversed its position and will provide $16.4 million this year for construction of new acute-care hospital facilities.

Informants announced plans earlier to shift acute-care funds to modernization of existing hospital facilities or to construction of long-term, out-patient and rehabilitation care units.

Charles Miller, an HEW budget officer, said the allocations for the other categories of the Hill-Burton program are:

Long-term, $20.3 million; outpatient, $70 million; rehabilitation, $15 million, and modernization, $50 million.

The Nixon administration had argued that additional federal subsidies for construction of acute-care facilities were unnecessary because adequate numbers of such beds now exist.

Irons Sworn In As District Judge

Hastings (UPI) —A new district court judge was sworn in at the Adams County courthouse here Tuesday.

Hastings attorney Fred Irons was sworn in as District Court judge of the 10th Judicial District. Presiding at the ceremony were the Chief Justice of the State Supreme Court, Paul White, associate Justice Leslie Boslaugh, and District Judge Norris Chadderdon.

Gov. J. J. Exon appointed Irons to the vacancy Feb. 3. He replaced the retiring Judge Edmund Nuss of Hastings, who served approximately 30 years on the bench.

Barbers Union Head, 2 Others Accused Of Kickback Conspiracy

Washington (AP) —The president of the International Barbers Union, the union's investment consultant and a New York lawyer were indicted Tuesday on charges of conspiring to obtain kickbacks in connection with loans from the union's pension fund.

Named in the indictment, which was returned in U.S. District Court in Chicago, were Joseph De Paola of Indianapolis, president of the union and chairman of its pension fund, Thomas A. Shaheen Jr. of London, England, investment consultant to the union and a former Chevy Chase, Md., resident, and Max Block Jr., a New York attorney.

Also named as a defendant in the federal action was the Columbia Financial Corp. of Chevy Chase, described as owned and controlled by Shaheen and Block.

Named as a co-conspirator but not indicted was another Chevy Chase firm, the Winthrop Lawrence Corp. Fifty per cent of that firm is owned by Columbia Financial and the other half by Lammot du Pont Copeland Jr.

Soliciting Charged

The indictment charges De Paola with soliciting and receiving $29,000 "in fees, kickbacks and commissions from Shaheen, Block and Columbia Financial Corp. with the intent to influence his decisions as chairman of the pension fund."

Shaheen, Block and Columbia Financial Corp. were charged with paying De Paola $29,000 to influence his decisions as chairman of the fund.

The indictment also accuses Shaheen, Block, De Paola and Columbia Financial of conspiring with the Winthrop Lawrence Corp. to get kickbacks from a California firm, Millerton-Lake Development Corp., to influence Shaheen's decisions as consultant to the union.

Much Said Received

The indictment said Shaheen solicited and received "commissions and fees from Millerton-Lake in the amount of $112,597, negotiable notes with face value of $25,000, two consultant agreements that would pay $4,000 a month for 36 months and 100 acres of land."

The Justice Department said the investigation of the barbers' pension fund was begun in mid-1969 when Labor Department investigators turned up irregularities during a routine examination of reports filed by the union.

The pension fund went into business Jan. 1, 1966, and has nearly 60,000 participants. Its first retirement checks were scheduled to go into the mail just two weeks ago.

The fund's latest filing with the Department of Labor listed assets of $16 million — half of this in loans and mortgages. A reserve of $4 million had been set up by the fund to cover possible losses on bad loans.

First Mid-America Retained For Big Airport Bond Issue

The Airport Authority Tuesday voted to retain First Mid-America Inc. as its financial agent and consultant for a proposed $5 million bond issue to finance a new terminal building.

The authority plans to issue the bonds this year and get construction under way by December or early 1972 as part of the Municipal Airport expansion program.

First Mid-America would receive $20,000, less the legal fee for a law firm's opinion that the bond issue is needed.

Rough Estimate

The $5 million price-tag was mentioned only as a rough estimate of the required funds.

In other action, the Airport Authority authorized its executive director, Rolland Harr, to appear before the State Aeronautics Commission to seek matching funds for heating and air-conditioning the present terminal concourse.

Authority member Joe Hampton, however, questioned the wisdom of purchasing the equipment in view of the planned move to the new terminal only two years later.

Water In Fuel

At the request of authority member Richard Chapin, the group also decided to request a report regarding water's getting into aviation fuel one day last month.

A supposedly foolproof system to keep water out of the gas apparently failed, causing engine problems to a Frontier Airlines plane while it was taxiing into position for takeoff.

Chapin, who was personally scheduled to fly that day, said that he did not find out about the situation from anyone connected with fueling but was luckily told about it by a second-hand source.

Western Union Earnings Rise

New York (AP) — Western Union Corp. reported Tuesday 1970 earnings of $23.4 million or $2.28 a share, up from $22.8 million or $2.37 a share in 1969.

Sales for 1970 totaled $399.5 million, up from $393.7 million in 1969, the company said.

During the fourth quarter of the year, earnings totaled $5.9 million, a 10.6% increase over the $5.3 million during the fourth quarter of 1969.

Fourth quarter sales totaled $93.8 million, 4.1% down from the $97.7 of the like period in 1969, the company said.

Game Chief Reports On Pools, Fields

State Game Commission Director Willard Barbee said Tuesday swimming facilities at Gretna and Kenesaw, plus four athletic fields at Scottsbluff have been completed recently through state and federal aid.

The projects were funded with federal money from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, which pays 50% of the estimated project cost, and the state pays 25%, while the communities pay the remainder.

Gretna's project, which included a swimming pool, wading pool and bathhouse, was originally estimated at $81,000. However, the final cost was $103,000, with the city paying the extra cost over and above its 25%.

Kenesaw's project, also a swimming pool, wading pool and bathhouse, was originally estimated at $58,000, but the total came to $63,000.

The Scottsbluff projects involved construction of baseball fields, a restroom building, a parking area and fencing at a cost of $30,215. In addition, a local group called the "23 Club" provided backstops, bleachers and additional fencing, Barbee said.

Mideast Topic In Foreign Policy Series

The second in an eight-week discussion series on "Great Decisions—1971" is scheduled for Wednesday evening at the Manpower Development Training Center, 620 No. 48th.

The series on key issues in United States foreign policy is being sponsored as a public service by the Lincoln Technical College.

Wednesday night's topic is "The Middle East Conflict: Is a peaceful settlement possible?".

The "great decisions" series, sponsored nationally by the Foreign Policy Association, is in its 17th year. This is the second year it has been offered locally by the Technical College.

Remaining sessions in this year's series, including topics ranging from China and the U.S. to man and his environment, will continue through March 31.

Each begins at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesdays at the Manpower center.

Pollution Costly

Rome (UPI) — Water pollution is costing Italy $4.8 billion a year in lost farm produce and other damage, the Public Works Ministry estimated.

Clyde Harkins Named Director Of Project 93

The new executive director of Project 93, a federally funded program to fight hunger in Nebraska, said Tuesday the number of persons using food stamps has doubled since the program began just over a year ago.

However, Clyde J. Harkins of Lincoln said, this still represents only 18% of those persons eligible for food stamps.

Harkins comments came at a Tuesday news conference at which it was announced that Harkins had succeeded acting director Barbara Snook as head of the predominantly voluntary program.

Harkins, 29, comes from the executive directorship of the Aberdeen (S.D.) senior center.

Project 93, an incorporated non-profit organization named to indicate interest in fighting hunger in all 93 counties of Nebraska, received a $164,000 federal grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity last July.

CLYDE HARKINS
Hunger Fighter

Volunteer services and gifts of equipment provide $33,000 of local matching funds, according to Harkins. No state or local tax money is used.

The staff of Outreach Volunteers and Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA) work from three area offices to inform persons throughout the state of the hunger problem in Nebraska and of available programs such as food stamps and school lunches.

Groups involved in the organization of Project 93 include the Health Department, Agriculture Department, the Nebraska Farmers Union, college students, church groups and several low-income groups.

Lincoln Police Find Copter Useful Crime-Fighting Tool

The police department's recently acquired helicopter has been credited for averting the possible rape of an 18-year-old Lincoln girl Monday night.

The young woman told police that a man had forced her behind a building near 19th and S, was molesting her and threatened to rape her when he was frightened off by the helicopter's flying over the area.

Police said Tuesday that a suspect was being held for questioning regarding the incident.

Complaints Filed

The helicopter, which has drawn complaints from residents because of its noise, was also instrumental in the apprehension of seven Iowa youths early Saturday morning following a high-speed chase on West O.

The chase began near 1st and O when police noticed that the car was listed as stolen, and ended near NW 13th and West S when the car ran into a snowbank.

The driver said the helicopter's searchlight distracted him and caused him to lose control of the vehicle.

Flight Discouraged

Police believe that the presence of the helicopter also discouraged the youths from fleeing on foot.

Police Inspector Robert Sawdon, who is in charge of the helicopter, said that the department is "extremely pleased" with the aircraft.

Sawdon said that the helicopter, which is "pretty much utilized every night, weather permitting," acts as a strong "deterrent to criminal offenders."

Two Bills Hit By Probation Officer Keller

Municipal Court probation officer Bob Keller said Tuesday passage of two bills currently before the Unicameral pertaining to driving offenses would be "bad legislation."

The two bills he referred to were LB595, introduced by Sen. Terry Carpenter, to do away with probation for drunk drivers, and LB603, jointly sponsored by Lincoln Sens. Roland Luedtke and Harold Simpson, to specify that the point system would apply even in cases where the court suspends sentence or orders probation.

Regarding LB595, Keller said that "it has been proven in many other states that if there is no control over these people they'll go out and commit the same offense again."

Keller maintained that "it is very important to have control" over driving offenders and said that LB603 too would create situations where there would be nothing to motivate an offender to change his driving habits.

He said that in the instance of a person who had already lost nine points, only by placing him on probation could the court hope to influence him, whereas if his license is taken away he will not even cooperate.

NU Vets Urge Budget Review

The Student Veterans organization at the Uniersity of Nebraska passed a resolution Tuesday urging Gov. J. James Exon to review his budget proposals for the University of Nebraska.

The resolution read, "Any downgrading of the University constitutes a downgrading of the state and the nation, any such degradation is contrary to the principles for which we served."

The organization also passed a resolution opposing a mandatory Proposal for Active Commitment to Education (PACE) but rather that the PACE program be voluntary.

The PACE program would take part of the funds from student activities fees and apply them for aid to underprivileged and low-income students wishing to enter the University.

Boy Scouts Take Part In National Ecology Program

The Cornhusker Boy Scout Council is participating in the national Save Our American Resources (SOAR) program, which is designed to create concern for the environment.

The program extends beyond the scope of the normal scouting conservation program and involves scouts at all levels in a range of activities that stress the need for clean air and unpolluted water.

The project is intended to develop in the scouts a desire to contribute to the development of a safe environment and a sense of responsibility toward the future of the land.

Harold Mischnick is in charge of the program for the Cornhusker Council. The chairman in each of the districts of the council are Robert Bishop, Three Rivers district; Alfred Bogle, Oregon Trail; August Jensen Jr., Sunrise, and Dave Van Horn, Antelope Valley.

Giving Letters A Rest

Some final football notes before giving the letters f-o-o-t-b-a-l-l on our typewriter a brief rest:

Even though they played constantly in the cold Minnesota weather, Vikings coach Bud Grant shunned the use of heaters on their bench to try to help keep his gridders warm.

"We don't believe in heaters and gloves," says Grant. "You play football outdoors. You go in the house to get warm.

"We want our people thinking about the game when they're on the field, not trying to get their backsides up to a heater."

'Skinny' Winston Had To Adjust

When the average person drops 25 pounds and gets down to 260 the nine doctors on the case nod approvingly and mutter, "Fine, fine. Only 70 more to go."

In the case of the 260-pound Winston Hill, the New York Jets top-notch tackle who has spent the last two winters in Lincoln, playing at that weight makes him feel at times positively debilitated. Winston was accustomed to playing at 275-285, and when he came to camp this year he had trouble adjusting to the lighter step and more agile moves.

"I didn't have the strength I used to have. I had to make certain adjustments. The added agility helped me on pass blocking but on running plays I had to concentrate harder on techniques.

"When you're a lot heavier than the man you're playing against you can sort of over-power him on running plays. You can get by with sloppy technique. But now I have to be more careful, more precise."

Hill, a one-time college tennis player, has no intention of maintaining that super-dreadnaught avordupois once his football days are done. He's too much aware of actuarial statistics. In high school he weighed 195 ("and I looked pudgy") and sees no reason why he can't get back to that eventually.

"I used to go up to 300 pounds in the off-season," he said. "Last winter I weighed 297. I went from 297 to 257 in one month by dieting, and it wasn't severe dieting either. I'll give myself three months to lose the 60 pounds and get down to 200. I don't anticipate any problems."

Then in the manner of weight-worriers going back to the Etruscan epicures, he sighed, "Keeping it there might be the only problem."

Let's Have That Again, Please!

A Sports Illustrated writer called Ted Nance, sports information director at Houston, and inquired, "Is it true that your offensive backfield coach is black?"

"No, he is brown," answered Nance. "In fact, we have two offensive backfield coaches. One of 'em's Brown and the other one is Redd." (Melvin Brown and Elmer Redd, who is the only black coach on the staff.)

"Well," asked the caller, "Is one of 'em black?"

"Yes," said Nance, "Redd is black and Brown is white."

About five minutes later the phone rang again and the same voice at the other end asked Nance, "Say, could you go over that again, please?"

Start Of A System

Here's one Peahead Walker used to tell about former Clemson coach Frank Howard:

"Howard chewed tobacco. The alumni didn't like it, but when he won his first three games, they grudgingly accepted it. When he won five of the first six, they even bought him a brass spittoon. Howard put it at the end of the bench and used it. When he won seven of nine and got a bowl bid, the alumni bought him a second brass spittoon which was placed at the other end of the bench.

"And that," confided Peahead, "was the start of the two-spittoon system in football."

Carter Swaps Pigskin For Computer

Evanston, Ill. (AP) — It's fourth down and goal to go in a National Football League game. Try a field goal or pass? Wrong. Try a run? Right!

Some 40 seconds are left, you have the ball and are losing by a touchdown or field goal. Call time out to stop the clock? Wrong!

The other team just has scored a touchdown. Your players get demoralized, right? Wrong!

These surprising answers come from Virgil Carter — not as a bright young quarterback for the Cincinnati Bengals, but as holder of a master's degree from Northwestern University's Graduate School of Business Administration.

Carter, 25, and Robert E. Machol, co-authored a technical paper, "Operations Research on Football," appearing in the February issue of a professional journal called "Operations Research." The study helped Carter get his Master's Business Administration degree.

The Carter-Machol report is the first phase of study involving 56 games during the first half of the 1969 NFL season and some 20,000 plays coded over a year by Carter's pretty, blonde wife, Judy.

The data was coded for computer analysis by Carter, now teaching at Xavier University in Cincinnati, and Prof. Machol, an avid football fan and currently one of 10 U.S. scientists visiting Russia on an exchange program.

The field goal is a solid gamble on fourth down and goal, about 98 per cent effective, if the ball is well centered and the team "has an effective kicker," the mathematical study said.

But it's only a 6 per cent surety if the angle is bad and the kicker is not sharp.

However, running the ball offers a 20 to 30 per cent chance to score a touchdown, the survey said. It emphasized that even if the run fails, the enemy is left in poor field position instead of getting the ball on the 20-yard line following a failing fourth down pass in the end zone or missed field goal.

The strategy of calling timeouts to stop the clock during the final two minutes of either half also is a mistake, the Carter-Machol report said.

A case in point was last season's Nov. 8 Cleveland-Oakland game. The Browns called time out in attempting to break a tie. Subsequently, they lost the ball on an interception and George Blanda booted a winning Raider field goal.

The authors suggested that a team trailing by seven points or fewer should never call a timeout with more than 30 seconds left if it has the ball, or with more than 1 minute left if the opponents have the ball.

The report disputes common assumption that players are demoralized after an opponent scored a touchdown. Contrarily, the study asserts, this is one of "the highest motivating forces" to rally a team.

The initial published treatise, Carter explained, was limited to answer the question of field position significance.

"Until our study, no one applied the mathematical equations of statistical analysis to assess the significance of field position," said Carter, who blossomed as a Bengal star last season after breaking in with the Chicago Bears as a straight A graduate of Brigham Young.

Midwest amateur boxing fans, who attended the 1970 Midwest Golden Gloves in Omaha, remember well the classic slugging battle between Fairbury's young Dan Griffin, the Southeast District champ, and veteran Tony Bazis, the Omaha District king.

A rematch could be on tap this weekend when the Midwest Golden Gloves take the stage at the Omaha Civic Auditorium Friday and Saturday nights since both are back for a repeat bid for a trip to the national Golden Gloves that went to South Dakota's Doug Barber in the 156-pound division last year.

Barber, who isn't back this year, won a decision over Bazis in the finals after Bazis had been awarded a decision over Griffin in their slambang semifinal battle.

Griffin went into the Midwest tourney a year ago with a 5-0 record, four of the wins coming via the knockout route, and decisioned Bob Stillwell of Scottsbluff in his opening Omaha bout.

Stillwell is again the Scottsbluff champion at 156 pounds.

And the 17-year-old Griffin again will take an impressive record into the Omaha action Friday night, a 4-0 mark with three knockouts.

A couple of strong challengers at 156 pounds figure to be Norfolk's Roger Pelster and South Dakota's Pat Sharkey.

Pelster was awarded an alternate's berth after losing a close decision to Gary Bauer in the Norfolk District semifinals. Bauer was a surprise knockout victim of Mickey Phillips in the Norfolk finals.

Pelster was the Norfolk entry at 147 pounds a year ago at Omaha and decisioned Grand Island's Gerald Hunt and South Dakota's John Hirning before losing a decision to brother Dick, the Omaha District champ, in the finals.

Dick is now fighting as a professional.

Hirning, who was the 1967 champion at 135 pounds and the 1968 king at 139 pounds, is back this year in the 147-pound division.

And he appears to be the class of that division.

The Southeast District champion is Lincoln's Fred Orduna, who was winless in two starts going into the district tourney, but won decisions over Roger Leuty and Dave Underhill for the district title.

The entries:

Huskers Down Buffs, 65-63

. . . MEELY MISSES LAYUP

Boulder, Colo. — Cliff Meely, the leading scorer in the Big Eight Conference, scored 29 points Tuesday night, but was unable to connect on a layup with six seconds remaining in the game to give Nebraska its first victory over Colorado here in 17 years, 65-63.

The Huskers led nearly the entire second half, but could never break the game open and with three minutes left to play Colorado took a 61-60 edge on a jump shot by Freddie Shell.

Nebraska's Chuck Jura regained the lead for the Huskers, potting a layup and a Mike Peterson free throw put the Buffs two down, 63-61 with 1:45 remaining.

Peterson missed his second shot of the one-and-one situation, but Jura pulled down the rebound and the Huskers retained possession.

With 1:15 showing on the clock, Colorado's Terry Jameson fouled Marv Stewart and the Husker playmaker converted twice for a 65-61 lead.

Bob Hofman's fielder tightened the game up again for the Buffs, but with only a minute left to play, Nebraska began working for a last shot.

A lane violation with 31 seconds remaining foiled that strategy and gave the ball back to Colorado, only two points down and with plenty of time to score, especially with a deadeye such as Meely to rely on.

Meely had his chance with six seconds remaining, but blew the layup and the Huskers pulled off the rebound, wrapping up the victory, their fifth in Big Eight play against three losses. Colorado's conference mark now sags to 4-4.

The game was nip-and-tuck all the way with the first half ending with a 40-39 Nebraska lead after the count was tied eight times.

Nebraska took the upper hand early in the second half when Colorado was unable to score for the first three minutes of the period, but the Huskers weren't shooting as well as they had been in the first half either and, when the Buffs found the range again, NU had only been able to mount a six-point edge, 45-39.

Although the only time the Huskers lost the lead after that was the one-point, 61-60 Colorado edge, coach Joe Cipriano's club could never build up a lead of more than four points after the intermission.

Stewart, who scored 27 points in Nebraska's Big Eight Conference Pre-Season tournament victory over the Buffs, matched that total again Tuesday night to lead the Huskers to their first victory in Boulder since the 1952-53 season.

Jura helped the Huskers to a 41-35 rebounding edge, hauling down 14 himself, while Meely had a like number for Colorado.

"The whole group never gave up," says Husker coach Cipriano. "They really worked. They kept their tempo and they kept their poise."

Cipriano said the man-to-man defense used to try to harness Meely "just slopped and dropped clear off. Everybody just went for Meely," he said.

The strategy, used in the second half, limited the CU ace American to just 12 second half points after a 17-point output before the intermission. Meely has been scoring at the highest rate ever by a Big Eight cager, going into the game with a 31.7 average.

Spiro T. Strikes Once More; Sporting Jinx Hits Sanders

. . . TENNIS MATCH REQUIRES WHEELCHAIR

Houston (AP) — Pro golfer Doug Sanders was limping Tuesday after injuring a knee playing tennis with Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

In fact, Sanders came home from the Bob Hope Golf Classic at Palm Springs, Calif. in a wheelchair.

Sanders' wife said the Houston pro and Agnew were partners in a doubles match Sunday night at Palm Springs when Sanders went back to hit a ball and fell, bruising his knee.

During last year's Hope Classic, Agnew conked partner Sanders on the head with a golf ball.

And in this year's tournament, the Vice President struck three spectators with his first two tee-shots.

Mrs. Sanders said the idea of her husband riding in a wheelchair at the Houston airport was her idea.

"We had so much baggage and Doug was limping so I suggested a wheelchair," she said. "He is fine now. Just a slight limp."

During a tennis doubles match in Washington last April, Agnew hit his partner, Peace Corps Director Joseph H. Blanchard, on the head with a service.

"The Vice President had nothing to do with this injury," Mrs. Sanders said. "Doug just fell going back for a shot.

"He really didn't want to say anything about it but someone saw him in the wheelchair."

Vaulter Injured At Omaha Asks State Court Reversal

A collegiate pole vaulter injured in a 1967 track meet in Omaha Tuesday asked the Nebraska Supreme Court to reverse a lower court ruling which dismissed his damage suit.

The athlete was Jack Johnson and he asked the high court to overturn a Douglas County District Court decision in which Judge Patrick Lynch dismissed Johnson's contentions.

Johnson, injured in May, 1967, while competing for Fort Hays State College, Kan., had filed the suit against the University of Omaha, now the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

According to the brief filed Tuesday with the Supreme Court clerk's office, Johnson was injured when he attempted to jump and fell, hitting a box under one of the standards supporting the crossbar.

In his lower court suit, Johnson contended most colleges do not use boxes to support the standards, but rather have the standards sitting on the ground.

Johnson's attorney contends Omaha University was guilty of negligence.

The school, however, replied by contending Johnson assumed risk through the act of jumping.

Federal Court Rules For NBA

. . . SUPERSONICS SUBJECT TO SANCTIONS IF HAYWOOD PLAYS

San Francisco (AP)— A federal appeals court here ruled in favor of the National Basketball Association Tuesday, holding that the Seattle SuperSonics will be subject to league sanctions should they contniue to play controversial Spencer Haywood.

"That's great — that's just great," NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy exulted when advised of the ruling.

Kennedy, in New York where the league will conduct an all-day owner's meeting Thursday, said he didn't know what sanctions, if any, the NBA would level against Seattle.

As each team has played the Sonics since Haywood joined them, it has issued a formal protest prior to its game. Some have demanded the forfeiture of each contest.

"I'll have to check with our counsel to get the full impact of this decision," Kennedy said.

Seattle club officials declined immediate comment on the ruling and player-coach Lenny Wilkens, who has insisted another NBA club would have signed Haywood if the Sonics had not done it first, was unavailable.

The 6-foot-9 Haywood, who jumped to the NBA from Denver of the American Basketball Association, has been playing with the Sonics since last month under a lower court's injunction against the NBA.

A three-judge U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel stayed the injunction Tuesday pending consideration of the NBA appeal from the lower court action.

However, in issuing the stay, the judges said the NBA could take no action against the Sonics for playing Haywood while the injunction was in effect.

The Sonics' next game is Wednesday night in Seattle against the Portland Trail Blazers.

The injunction against the NBA was issued by a federal district court in Los Angeles and enjoined the league from enforcing its rules to keep Haywood from playing or to punish the Sonics for using him.

Haywood and the team sought the injunction on the grounds that the NBA's four-year rule, applying to college players, violated antitrust laws.

The league rule in question prohibits a player from entering the NBA until his college class has graduated. Haywood, a former All-American at the University of Detroit, would be a senior if he were still in school.

Haywood signed with the Denver Rockets before the 1969-70 season and went on to become the ABA's top scorer, rookie of the year and most valuable player.

But he jumped to Seattle after claiming a new contract he signed with the Rockets was invalid.

The court in Los Angeles has scheduled a trial, starting March 2, on the Haywood case, including the question of whether he had a valid contract with Denver.

Haywood has played 23 games with the Sonics and is averaging about 19 points per game, but the team has been doing poorly and was in fourth place Tuesday in the Pacific Division of the NBA.

Fire Sidelines York High Bus

Time trials scheduled for the York High School track team at East High in Lincoln were cancelled Tuesday after a fire caused by faulty wiring in their bus defeated the team's efforts to get to the Lincoln school.

York Coach Jerry Yowell said that he had stopped at the railroad tracks across from Foster's Cafe on West O when the fire began. He said that he managed to get the bus over to the side of the road, but the damaged wiring would allow the bus to go no more.

The coach was taking eight team members to East High to practice for an upcoming Kearney Invitational Indoor track meet.

The team called York and another bus was sent to retrieve them.

Mead (Who Else?) On Top In Stable Class D Ranks

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

Since the only thing predictable about high school basketball is its unpredictability, having a ratings top ten listing stay exactly the same from one week to the next is a real rarity.

But it almost happened this week in Class D. The same 10 teams occupy the small school list as a week ago, and except for the sixth and seventh positions flip-flopping, the order is also the same.

The top five teams played nine games during the past week and won them all. That doesn't give much excuse for making a change.

Mead retains its No. 1 position after 17 straight victories. The Raiders had 57 points to spare in the latest pair over the past weekend.

Runnerup Doniphan was the busiest since the last ratings, winning three times on the way to the South Central Conference championships. The Cardinals are also unbeaten in 17 starts.

Adams and Odell, which take delight in edging each other by one point in overtime, sailed to easy triumphs last week, while No. 5 Benedict also captured its only test.

Of the 370 high school teams in the state, only five remain unbeaten. Class A is without a perfect record, there is just one in B and C, while Mead, Doniphan and Benedict complete the list.

The one change in the small school top ten comes after the most recent Overton-Hildreth meeting. Hildreth won the first clash between the Fort Kearney Conference foes. Overton changes places with the Greyhounds and goes up to sixth after winning the rematch on its way to the league tourney title.

Litchfield, Yutan and Trenton had a busy week. They played seven games and posted as many wins to hang on to the final three rungs on the ratings ladder.

Giving Letters A Rest

Some final football notes before giving the letters f-o-o-t-b-a-l-l on our typewriter a brief rest:

Even though they played constantly in the cold Minnesota weather, Vikings coach Bud Grant shunned the use of heaters on their bench to try to help keep his gridders warm.

"We don't believe in heaters and gloves," says Grant. "You play football outdoors. You go in the house to get warm.

"We want our people thinking about the game when they're on the field, not trying to get their backsides up to a heater."

'Skinny' Winston Had To Adjust

When the average person drops 25 pounds and gets down to 260 the nine doctors on the case nod approvingly and mutter, "Fine, fine. Only 70 more to go."

In the case of the 260-pound Winston Hill, the New York Jets top-notch tackle who has spent the last two winters in Lincoln, playing at that weight makes him feel at times positively debilitated. Winston was accustomed to playing at 275-285, and when he came to camp this year he had trouble adjusting to the lighter step and more agile moves.

"I didn't have the strength I used to have. I had to make certain adjustments. The added agility helped me on pass blocking but on running plays I had to concentrate harder on techniques.

"When you're a lot heavier than the man you're playing against you can sort of over-power him on running plays. You can get by with sloppy technique. But now I have to be more careful, more precise."

Hill, a one-time college tennis player, has no intention of maintaining that super-dreadnaught avordupois once his football days are done. He's too much aware of actuarial statistics. In high school he weighed 195 ("and I looked pudgy") and sees no reason why he can't get back to that eventually.

"I used to go up to 300 pounds in the off-season," he said. "Last winter I weighed 297. I went from 297 to 257 in one month by dieting, and it wasn't severe dieting either. I'll give myself three months to lose the 60 pounds and get down to 200. I don't anticipate any problems."

Then in the manner of weight-worriers going back to the Etruscan epicures, he sighed, "Keeping it there might be the only problem."

Let's Have That Again, Please!

A Sports Illustrated writer called Ted Nance, sports information director at Houston, and inquired, "Is it true that your offensive backfield coach is black?"

"No, he is brown," answered Nance. "In fact, we have two offensive backfield coaches. One of 'em's Brown and the other one is Redd." (Melvin Brown and Elmer Redd, who is the only black coach on the staff.)

"Well," asked the caller, "Is one of 'em black?"

"Yes," said Nance, "Redd is black and Brown is white."

About five minutes later the phone rang again and the same voice at the other end asked Nance, "Say, could you go over that again, please?"

Start Of A System

Here's one Peahead Walker used to tell about former Clemson coach Frank Howard:

"Howard chewed tobacco. The alumni didn't like it, but when he won his first three games, they grudgingly accepted it. When he won five of the first six, they even bought him a brass spittoon. Howard put it at the end of the bench and used it. When he won seven of nine and got a bowl bid, the alumni bought him a second brass spittoon which was placed at the other end of the bench.

"And that," confided Peahead, "was the start of the two-spittoon system in football."

Carter Swaps Pigskin For Computer

Evanston, Ill. (AP) — It's fourth down and goal to go in a National Football League game. Try a field goal or pass? Wrong. Try a run? Right!

Some 40 seconds are left, you have the ball and are losing by a touchdown or field goal. Call time out to stop the clock? Wrong!

The other team just has scored a touchdown. Your players get demoralized, right? Wrong!

These surprising answers come from Virgil Carter — not as a bright young quarterback for the Cincinnati Bengals, but as holder of a master's degree from Northwestern University's Graduate School of Business Administration.

Carter, 25, and Robert E. Machol, co-authored a technical paper, "Operations Research on Football," appearing in the February issue of a professional journal called "Operations Research." The study helped Carter get his Master's Business Administration degree.

The Carter-Machol report is the first phase of study involving 56 games during the first half of the 1969 NFL season and some 20,000 plays coded over a year by Carter's pretty, blonde wife, Judy.

The data was coded for computer analysis by Carter, now teaching at Xavier University in Cincinnati, and Prof. Machol, an avid football fan and currently one of 10 U.S. scientists visiting Russia on an exchange program.

The field goal is a solid gamble on fourth down and goal, about 98 per cent effective, if the ball is well centered and the team "has an effective kicker," the mathematical study said.

But it's only a 6 per cent surety if the angle is bad and the kicker is not sharp.

However, running the ball offers a 20 to 30 per cent chance to score a touchdown, the survey said. It emphasized that even if the run fails, the enemy is left in poor field position instead of getting the ball on the 20-yard line following a failing fourth down pass in the end zone or missed field goal.

The strategy of calling timeouts to stop the clock during the final two minutes of either half also is a mistake, the Carter-Machol report said.

A case in point was last season's Nov. 8 Cleveland-Oakland game. The Browns called time out in attempting to break a tie. Subsequently, they lost the ball on an interception and George Blanda booted a winning Raider field goal.

The authors suggested that a team trailing by seven points or fewer should never call a timeout with more than 30 seconds left if it has the ball, or with more than 1 minute left if the opponents have the ball.

The report disputes common assumption that players are demoralized after an opponent scored a touchdown. Contrarily, the study asserts, this is one of "the highest motivating forces" to rally a team.

The initial published treatise, Carter explained, was limited to answer the question of field position significance.

"Until our study, no one applied the mathematical equations of statistical analysis to assess the significance of field position," said Carter, who blossomed as a Bengal star last season after breaking in with the Chicago Bears as a straight A graduate of Brigham Young.

Huskers Down Buffs, 65-63

. . . MEELY MISSES LAYUP

Boulder, Colo. — Cliff Meely, the leading scorer in the Big Eight Conference, scored 29 points Tuesday night, but was unable to connect on a layup with six seconds remaining in the game to give Nebraska its first victory over Colorado here in 17 years, 65-63.

The Huskers led nearly the entire second half, but could never break the game open and with three minutes left to play Colorado took a 61-60 edge on a jump shot by Freddie Shell.

Nebraska's Chuck Jura regained the lead for the Huskers, potting a layup and a Mike Peterson free throw put the Buffs two down, 63-61 with 1:45 remaining.

Peterson missed his second shot of the one-and-one situation, but Jura pulled down the rebound and the Huskers retained possession.

With 1:15 showing on the clock, Colorado's Terry Jameson fouled Marv Stewart and the Husker playmaker converted twice for a 65-61 lead.

Bob Hofman's fielder tightened the game up again for the Buffs, but with only a minute left to play, Nebraska began working for a last shot.

A lane violation with 31 seconds remaining foiled that strategy and gave the ball back to Colorado, only two points down and with plenty of time to score, especially with a deadeye such as Meely to rely on.

Meely had his chance with six seconds remaining, but blew the layup and the Huskers pulled off the rebound, wrapping up the victory, their fifth in Big Eight play against three losses. Colorado's conference mark now sags to 4-4.

The game was nip-and-tuck all the way with the first half ending with a 40-39 Nebraska lead after the count was tied eight times.

Nebraska took the upper hand early in the second half when Colorado was unable to score for the first three minutes of the period, but the Huskers weren't shooting as well as they had been in the first half either and, when the Buffs found the range again, NU had only been able to mount a six-point edge, 45-39.

Although the only time the Huskers lost the lead after that was the one-point, 61-60 Colorado edge, coach Joe Cipriano's club could never build up a lead of more than four points after the intermission.

Stewart, who scored 27 points in Nebraska's Big Eight Conference Pre-Season tournament victory over the Buffs, matched that total again Tuesday night to lead the Huskers to their first victory in Boulder since the 1952-53 season.

Jura helped the Huskers to a 41-35 rebounding edge, hauling down 14 himself, while Meely had a like number for Colorado.

"The whole group never gave up," says Husker coach Cipriano. "They really worked. They kept their tempo and they kept their poise."

Cipriano said the man-to-man defense used to try to harness Meely "just slopped and dropped clear off. Everybody just went for Meely," he said.

The strategy, used in the second half, limited the CU ace American to just 12 second half points after a 17-point output before the intermission. Meely has been scoring at the highest rate ever by a Big Eight cager, going into the game with a 31.7 average.

Spiro T. Strikes Once More; Sporting Jinx Hits Sanders

. . . TENNIS MATCH REQUIRES WHEELCHAIR

Houston (AP) — Pro golfer Doug Sanders was limping Tuesday after injuring a knee playing tennis with Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

In fact, Sanders came home from the Bob Hope Golf Classic at Palm Springs, Calif. in a wheelchair.

Sanders' wife said the Houston pro and Agnew were partners in a doubles match Sunday night at Palm Springs when Sanders went back to hit a ball and fell, bruising his knee.

During last year's Hope Classic, Agnew conked partner Sanders on the head with a golf ball.

And in this year's tournament, the Vice President struck three spectators with his first two tee-shots.

Mrs. Sanders said the idea of her husband riding in a wheelchair at the Houston airport was her idea.

"We had so much baggage and Doug was limping so I suggested a wheelchair," she said. "He is fine now. Just a slight limp."

During a tennis doubles match in Washington last April, Agnew hit his partner, Peace Corps Director Joseph H. Blanchard, on the head with a service.

"The Vice President had nothing to do with this injury," Mrs. Sanders said. "Doug just fell going back for a shot.

"He really didn't want to say anything about it but someone saw him in the wheelchair."

Vaulter Injured At Omaha Asks State Court Reversal

A collegiate pole vaulter injured in a 1967 track meet in Omaha Tuesday asked the Nebraska Supreme Court to reverse a lower court ruling which dismissed his damage suit.

The athlete was Jack Johnson and he asked the high court to overturn a Douglas County District Court decision in which Judge Patrick Lynch dismissed Johnson's contentions.

Johnson, injured in May, 1967, while competing for Fort Hays State College, Kan., had filed the suit against the University of Omaha, now the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

According to the brief filed Tuesday with the Supreme Court clerk's office, Johnson was injured when he attempted to jump and fell, hitting a box under one of the standards supporting the crossbar.

In his lower court suit, Johnson contended most colleges do not use boxes to support the standards, but rather have the standards sitting on the ground.

Johnson's attorney contends Omaha University was guilty of negligence.

The school, however, replied by contending Johnson assumed risk through the act of jumping.

Federal Court Rules For NBA

. . . SUPERSONICS SUBJECT TO SANCTIONS IF HAYWOOD PLAYS

San Francisco (AP)— A federal appeals court here ruled in favor of the National Basketball Association Tuesday, holding that the Seattle SuperSonics will be subject to league sanctions should they contniue to play controversial Spencer Haywood.

"That's great — that's just great," NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy exulted when advised of the ruling.

Kennedy, in New York where the league will conduct an all-day owner's meeting Thursday, said he didn't know what sanctions, if any, the NBA would level against Seattle.

As each team has played the Sonics since Haywood joined them, it has issued a formal protest prior to its game. Some have demanded the forfeiture of each contest.

"I'll have to check with our counsel to get the full impact of this decision," Kennedy said.

Seattle club officials declined immediate comment on the ruling and player-coach Lenny Wilkens, who has insisted another NBA club would have signed Haywood if the Sonics had not done it first, was unavailable.

The 6-foot-9 Haywood, who jumped to the NBA from Denver of the American Basketball Association, has been playing with the Sonics since last month under a lower court's injunction against the NBA.

A three-judge U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel stayed the injunction Tuesday pending consideration of the NBA appeal from the lower court action.

However, in issuing the stay, the judges said the NBA could take no action against the Sonics for playing Haywood while the injunction was in effect.

The Sonics' next game is Wednesday night in Seattle against the Portland Trail Blazers.

The injunction against the NBA was issued by a federal district court in Los Angeles and enjoined the league from enforcing its rules to keep Haywood from playing or to punish the Sonics for using him.

Haywood and the team sought the injunction on the grounds that the NBA's four-year rule, applying to college players, violated antitrust laws.

The league rule in question prohibits a player from entering the NBA until his college class has graduated. Haywood, a former All-American at the University of Detroit, would be a senior if he were still in school.

Haywood signed with the Denver Rockets before the 1969-70 season and went on to become the ABA's top scorer, rookie of the year and most valuable player.

But he jumped to Seattle after claiming a new contract he signed with the Rockets was invalid.

The court in Los Angeles has scheduled a trial, starting March 2, on the Haywood case, including the question of whether he had a valid contract with Denver.

Haywood has played 23 games with the Sonics and is averaging about 19 points per game, but the team has been doing poorly and was in fourth place Tuesday in the Pacific Division of the NBA.

Fire Sidelines York High Bus

Time trials scheduled for the York High School track team at East High in Lincoln were cancelled Tuesday after a fire caused by faulty wiring in their bus defeated the team's efforts to get to the Lincoln school.

York Coach Jerry Yowell said that he had stopped at the railroad tracks across from Foster's Cafe on West O when the fire began. He said that he managed to get the bus over to the side of the road, but the damaged wiring would allow the bus to go no more.

The coach was taking eight team members to East High to practice for an upcoming Kearney Invitational Indoor track meet.

The team called York and another bus was sent to retrieve them.

Mead (Who Else?) On Top In Stable Class D Ranks

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

Since the only thing predictable about high school basketball is its unpredictability, having a ratings top ten listing stay exactly the same from one week to the next is a real rarity.

But it almost happened this week in Class D. The same 10 teams occupy the small school list as a week ago, and except for the sixth and seventh positions flip-flopping, the order is also the same.

The top five teams played nine games during the past week and won them all. That doesn't give much excuse for making a change.

Mead retains its No. 1 position after 17 straight victories. The Raiders had 57 points to spare in the latest pair over the past weekend.

Runnerup Doniphan was the busiest since the last ratings, winning three times on the way to the South Central Conference championships. The Cardinals are also unbeaten in 17 starts.

Adams and Odell, which take delight in edging each other by one point in overtime, sailed to easy triumphs last week, while No. 5 Benedict also captured its only test.

Of the 370 high school teams in the state, only five remain unbeaten. Class A is without a perfect record, there is just one in B and C, while Mead, Doniphan and Benedict complete the list.

The one change in the small school top ten comes after the most recent Overton-Hildreth meeting. Hildreth won the first clash between the Fort Kearney Conference foes. Overton changes places with the Greyhounds and goes up to sixth after winning the rematch on its way to the league tourney title.

Litchfield, Yutan and Trenton had a busy week. They played seven games and posted as many wins to hang on to the final three rungs on the ratings ladder.

Hot Pants On Golf Links?

. . . LADIES' PRO TOUR NEEDS HYPO

New York (AP) — The ladies' pro golf tour, which has been struggling for attention, may have found the answer — "hot pants."

"I am sure one of the girls will turn up on the tour with hot pants one of these days," Shirley Englehorn, the 1970 PGA champion, said Tuesday.

"The skirts are getting shorter than the putts," agreed Donna Caponi, the U.S. Open champion. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if hot pants made their appearance on the tour.

"But not for me, I don't have the legs for them."

Shirley, from Caldwell, Idaho, and Donna, from Burbank, Calif., were in New York to be honored Tuesday night at the annual awards dinner of the Metropolitan Golf Writers.

The principal award — the gold tee — was presented to Bill Casper, 1970 professional golfer of the year, by Arnold Palmer, fresh from a victory in the Bob Hope Classic Sunday.

Shirley, a tall, attractive blonde, said the girl golfers were becoming very style conscious.

"We have an unwritten rule now that skirts and shorts should not be shorter than three inches above the knee cap," she added. "Of course, this is not strictly observed."

Hot pants are the latest style craze of the mods. They are midi shorts — skin tight apparel that covers little more than a bathing suit.

"Once Carol Mann and I had an urge to get out on the course in bathing suits," Shirley said. "But we chickened out."

Donna's 23-year-old kid sister, Janet, one of the most striking of the female golfers, wears mini skirts on the course but says she doubts that she would ever resort to hot pants.

"I don't think they'd be comfortable," she said. "I'm uncomfortable in a short skirt when I have a side-hill lie. Can you imagine what it would be like if I had a shot like that wearing hot pants?"

The girl golfers have been complaining because purses at women's tournaments are so much smaller than those at men's events, where the prize money often runs more than $100,000 and up to $250,000.

They are having their richest tournament, starting Friday, at Port St. Lucie in Fort Pierce, Fla., a $60,000 event sponsored by Sears-Roebuck. Among the prizes is a mink coat.

A style show is scheduled Wednesday. Sponsors declined to say whether hot pants would be among the items displayed.

Tennessee State Survives Oglethorpe's Stall Strategy

Atlanta (AP) — Tennessee State, ranked No. 6 in The Associated Press small college basketball poll, survived Oglethorpe's deep freeze tactics Tuesday night and won a 7-4 decision in what is believed to be the lowest scoring college basketball game in modern times.

State jumped to a 2-0 lead after only 10 seconds of play when Lloyd Neal rebounded a basket.
missed shot and put it in the Oglethorpe then held the ball until slightly more than four minutes remained in the half when a bad pass allowed Tennessee State to take a 4-0 lead on Ron Dorsey's lay-up.

The Atlanta school took the second half tip and held the ball for 16 minutes before calling time.

Oglethorpe cut the margin to 4-2 with 3:21 left when Terry Shell hit from the outside but Tennessee State sank three free throws down the stretch while Oglethorpe managed only a field goal by Larry Walker with 1:48 remaining.

"It was a helluva defensive job we did," said Coach Ed Martin of Tennessee State. "I don't blame Tommy. If he thought that is what it would take to win, more power to him."

Oglethorpe Coach Tommy Norwood said, "I'm surprised as anybody. I had no intention to have the boys hold in the whole game.

"I just wanted to spread it out and have them come get us."

Al Duer, executive secretary of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics in Kansas City, said he has never heard of any score as low since the NAIA's inception.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association record book lists no low score for two teams in its college division. The single team low was four points by Adrian in a 76-4 loss to Albion Dec. 12, 1938.

The NCAA major college low was 22 points, in North Carolina State's 12-10 triumph over Duke in 1968.

Tennessee State beat Oglethorpe 82-43 earlier this year.

Nastase Escapes Upset Bid

Salisbury, Md. (AP) — Defending champion Ilie Nastase of Romania survived a serious scare from teenager Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., Tuesday night to gain the third round of the $50,000 U.S. National Indoor Open Tennis Championships.

Nastase rallied for a 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 victory over the 18-year-old left-handed youngster whom Pancho Gonzalez calls the best young player in America.

Connors broke the last of his three rackets at a crucial point in the second set and the turning point came when he was using an unfamiliar racket borrowed from Brazilian Ronnie Barnes.

Connors, who learned the game from Pancho Segura and practices with Gonzalez, overpowered Nastase in the first set to win the favor of 2,300 spectators to whom Nastase is a local favorite.

Connors broke Nastase for the second time in the 12th game to take the first set.

The second set was even on service until Connors broke his racket at 4-4. Nastase broke through in the very next game and held the advantage to win the set.

East Sharpshooter Snares Player Of Week Honors

. . . RECKEWEY SNAPS SCHOOL POINT MARK

By VIRGIL PARKER
Prep Sports Writer

East High's Kent Reckewey could be nominated as Player of the Week most any Monday morning. He's had many outstanding games during his three-year career for the Spartans.

But none was better than his performance against crosstown rival Southeast last weekend when he hiked East's school scoring record from the 36 he set a year ago against Northeast to the 38 he knocked in Saturday night.

As a result the 6-1 Spartan senior sharpshooter, a returning all-stater, adds the current Player of the Week honor to his many awards of the past.

"He's had a lot of super scoring nights," his coach Paul Forch said, "but never has he done everything so well. Besides his scoring, he played good defense, rebounded and had a bundle of assists."

Reckewey left the game with nearly four minutes left to play after connecting on 15 of 23 attempts from the field and a perfect 8-8 from the free throw line.

Others who had outstanding games over the weekend and deserve special mention include:

Rick Heldt, Yutan —He scored 64 points while pacing Yutan to a pair of victories, highlighted by his 35 against Cedar Bluffs in an 82-61 win.

Kim Veerhusen, Adams —His six straight free throws, when Adams held a slim fourth-quarter lead, kept Sterling at bay on the way to an 84-77 victory. Veerhusen had nine fielders and 16 of 18 from the charity stripe on the way to a 34-point night.

Jeff Jacobsen, Marquette—His clutch field goal helped his club to an overtime triumph over Polk.

Steve Vanderslice, Chester — This sophomore tallied 15 points in the second half to pace Chester-Hubbell to a slim 55-53 win over Shickley.

Scott Hoemann, North Platte — Scott only had three free throws for the entire game, but two of them came with nine seconds remaining to give North Platte a come-from-behind 56-55 victory over Alliance.

Dick Burgert, Table Rock — Though managing just two points in the first half on a pair of free throws, Dick came back to cast up 14 shots in the second half and hit them all. Three more charity tosses enabled him to finish with a 33-point night.

Ken Miller, Brady — His field goal with just eight seconds left provided Brady with a 62-60 win over Maywood.

Killebrew Receives Top Salary From Minnesota

Orlando, Fla. (AP) — Minnesota Twins' President Calvin Griffith acknowledged Tuesday that slugger Harmon Killebrew will be the first player he's ever paid at least $100,000, but said baseball salary ceilings must be reached soon.

"I don't know where it will stop," Griffith said in reference to six-figure salaries, "but it's got to because the clubs cannot afford to keep it up."

Griffith, who says he does not deserve a reputation as an owner who pays low salaries, said Killebrew will be the only player in his organization paid in the $100,000 bracket this year.

"I read this morning that Tony Oliva wants $100,000," he said. "Oliva has made pretty good money. He's got to be one of the best paid players in baseball."

Oliva said Willie Mays and Robert Clemente were being paid $70,000 more than he is and he doubts they are that much more valuable. Griffith said he questions that they make that much more than Oliva.

"Tony's got to remember one thing," Griffith said, "and that is that Mays and Clemente have been in the league a lot longer."

Griffith said that since moving the Minnesota club from Washington, the total salaries of the Twins have always been second or third in the American League. "If that's being tight with money, then I haven't succeeded, have I? I think I've been one of the most liberal men in baseball since we moved."

Limongello Heads Earnings List On PBA Tour

Akron, Ohio (AP) — Second-place money of $6,000 in last week's Andy Granatelli STP Classic in Kansas City enabled Mike Limongello of North Babylon, N.Y., to take a slim lead in the Professional Bowlers' Association's earnings standings.

Limongello has $14,700 for the season to lead Don Johnson of Akron, who won $2,250 last week for a total of $14,201. Johnny Guenther of Seattle won the STP Classic for $10,000 and his $11,325 for the season puts him in seventh place.

Stock Mart Posts Modest Advances

New York (AP) — Another cut in the prime rate and a favorable development in the international oil picture helped the stock market make modest advances Tuesday. Volume after the long holiday weekend was very heavy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks made a minor gain of 1.23 points to close at 890.06, as turnover on the New York Stock Exchange reached 21.35 million shares, up from 18.47 million shares Friday.

Advances led declines 838 to 603 among the 1,706 Big Board issues traded.

The prime rate-interest commercial banks charge on loans to their most creditworthy customers — was cut to 5¾% from 6% by two major New York banks before the market opened. The action was quickly followed by other banks across the country.

Occidental Petroleum, up ⅞ to 22 on 264,800 shares, was the most-active Big Board stock, while Gulf Oil, the third-most active issue, gained ⅞ to 31⅜ on 175,300 shares.

Howard Johnson, up ⅞ at 25 on 204,400 shares, was the second-heaviest-traded stock.

The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks gained 0.13 to 54.29, while Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was ahead .23 to 98.66, a new 1970-71 high.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up 1.0 to 310.1, also a 1970-71 high, with industrials up 1.6, rails ahead .9, and utilities unchanged.

The largest of 131 blocks traded on the Big Board was 199,500 shares of Howard Johnson at 25⅛, up 1. Other big blocks included 65,000 shares of Continental Oil at 34¼, up ⅛, and 63,900 of Talley Industries at 15, down 1.

Other closing Big Board prices included:

New Jersey Stndard, up 2⅛ to 74⅜; Continental Oil, up ⅛ at 34½; Texaco, ahead ¾ at 36⅛; Lockheed, off ⅜ to 10½; Southern Co., up ⅛ to 25½; Goodyear, up ½ to 31⅞; and CNA Financial, ahead ¾ to 20.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index gained .07 to 25.44 as advances outnumbered declines 532 to 411 among the 1,167 issues traded. Volume of 8.08 million shares compared with 6.98 million shares Friday.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Wage And Price Controls Would Freeze Inequities

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

MERRYLE RUKEYSER

Intellectual Sickness

The self assurance of misguided members of the-earth-is-flat-school-of-economics becomes increasingly arrogant.

To the simple minded all appears to be simple. Economic illiterates want to continue to inflate the currency with all varieties of excesses and undertake to avoid the consequences of their follies through price fixing of wages and prices.

Such wide circulated nonsense, like Hitler's big lie technique, becomes familiar through repetition. If divorced from political slogans and public relations palaver, this approach means that, having continued to mismanage financial affairs, the federal government through imposed wage and price controls would make it illegal for individuals or companies to test the effect of malpractices on buying power of the dollar. These regimenters would make it criminal to pay more for an hour of labor or a piece of merchandise than little commissars in big jobs arbitrarily decree.

There is intellectual sickness in the notion that a people can misbehave financially and avoid paying for their errors through an offsetting manipulation.

Lack Intelligence

While the home bred demagogues talk glibly about the rights of the people, they lack the wit and intelligence to know that true freedom is associated with non-interference with the open market, where free men express their preferences for goods and services and test the true buying power of money.

Although sophists on the political stump advocate money manipulation as a way of life, good money is issued in balance with the actual production of goods and services. Money loses its quality when it increases more rapidly than the production of goods and services. Money deterioration skyrockets the price tag on things.

Economic controls are inconsistent with a free society. Even in dire war periods, virtuous citizens make sacrifices to comply, whereas the chiselers, who operate in black markets, are the beneficiaries. Controls freeze inequities.

Stem From Maladjustments

Recessions stem from maladjustments and disparities, which interfere with the uninterrupted flow of goods from maker to user. Such maladjustments consist of unbalanced income relationships, a disparity between the money supply and the availability of goods and various other factors. When such obstacles are removed, the U.S. norm is a growing national economy.

After two years of the Nixon administration, with the 1972 election in the offing, there is concern lest rising unemployment and other unpleasant human effects of corrective, anti-inflation measures, be associated with the present occupant of the White House, rather than with the blunders of the Johnson administration, which erred for a time as the Vietnamese War was expanded by saying "We can have guns and butter too." The resultant gigantic deficit reflecting war escalation and an increase in expenditures for domestic social schemes touched off an accelerated rate of inflation. This was countered by anti-inflationary restrictive monetary and fiscal measures, with a cooling off of the frenzied demand for goods, a collapse of stock prices, and rising unemployment.

With Nixon in mid-term, the President evidently did not want to jeopardize reelection prospects by becoming known as the executive who brought on unemployment. Accordingly, instead of further tightening the screws and taking the consequences of corrective measures in the form of transient human suffering and hardship, the Nixon administration opted for a variant of Keynesian easy money in the form of resumption of deficit financing, instead of budgetary austerity. President Nixon advocated "a full employment budget," in which revenues would equal expenditures if the work force were fully employed.

Keynes excused budgetary deficits in periods of slack employment and advocated reversal of policy in time of full employment when he wanted budgets fully balanced — in fact, surpluses for debt reduction. The new Nixon budgetary policy is nearer pure Keynes than that of the Kennedy-Johnson period. But it is manipulative and the administration will need good luck and good timing to make it work.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self addressed envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)

Large Increase In Unemployment In The Forecast

Berkeley, Calif. (UPI) — A high rate of unemployment through 1971 is in prospect for California despite an overall modest expansion of the state's economy.

The prediction was contained in a report issued by the California Economic Forecasting Project at the Institute of Business and Economics Research at the University of California.

Parade is the big four-color picture magazine section in the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Shah Says He'll Take Two Islands

Zurich, Switzerland (AP) — The shah of Iran said Tuesday his country will take, by force if necessary, a group of islands commanding the entrance to the Persian Gulf once the British leave them.

"They belonged to us and we have British Admiralty maps and other documents to prove it," the Iranian ruler said.

"We shall take them back by force if necessary for I do not intend to preside over an auction of my country."

The shah was speaking in an interview aboard a private flight taking him to a winter vacation in Switzerland.

The tiny islands, Abu Musa and the Thums, have long been regarded by Britain as belonging to the British-protected Trucial states on the Arabian coast of the gulf.

The shah, 51, expressed concern at spreading leftist subversion in the gulf region, which he fears might threaten the route by which Iran exports its oil wealth.

"If those islands fell into the wrong hands it could pose a terrible danger," he said. "When the British came to the gulf, Iran was a weak country and they found it necessary to occupy the islands to combat piracy. But they have always belonged to us and when the British go they cannot give them away to someone else."

The shah suggested Iran was ready to take Britain's place as the policeman of the gulf.

"We are the only country with the economic and military sophistication necessary to offer the area protection," he asserted.

Nickel Pack Of Gum Is A Bygone

Chicago (AP) — The Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co., which had held the line on the 5-cent package of chewing gum while other manufacturers raised their prices, announced Tuesday it is increasing its wholesale price of five-stick packs by three-fifths of a cent.

It was the company's second price increase in 53 years.

Wrigley officials said continually rising costs of doing business prompted the price hike.

The new wholesale price is 72 cents per box of 20 five-stick packs. The previous price per box was 60 cents.

Wrigley spokesmen said the retail price increase would be determined by individual dealers.

Most other manufacturers charge 7 cents per pack.

Correct Miles Wanted

Concord, N.H. (UPI) — A measure introduced in the New Hampshire legislature would require sworn statements on the mileage and any physical damage over $500 to cars being sold second hand.

DID YOU KNOW THIS? IT'S A FACT:

The South Pole was reached by Amundsen Dec. 14, 1911.

☆ ☆ ☆

Variations in the Earth's gravitational field cause erratic motion in satellites circling the planet.

☆ ☆ ☆

The average U.S. life expectancy in 1900 was 47.3 years.

☆ ☆ ☆

In several areas below the Equator, the Earth bulges, but at the South Pole is pushed in about 90 feet.

Adult king cobra snakes commonly measure 15 feet or more.

☆ ☆ ☆

One inch of rainfall over one acre of ground is about 27,000 gallons of water.

☆ ☆ ☆

According to folklore, plenty of acorns, hickory and other nuts, with squirrels working overtime storing them away — means a severe winter.

☆ ☆ ☆

Deer fawns are born in May or early June.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE

Here's How To Work It

One letter simply stands for another in this example, A is used for the three L's X for the two O's etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A X Y D L B A A X R

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.
